MIGHTY APHRODITE

PRELUDE

A MOMENT IN 'TIME'

Have you ever really questioned the reason we're all actually here? Like, sat and pondered the truth about it all? When it comes to life's big questions, the only undoubtable truth to me is that it all comes down to LOVE.

Love. Such a bewildering, mysterious and intoxicating thing. The only thing everyone really wants but the one thing no-one really knows how to find, certainly no-one knows how to keep.

I only know that throughout my life, nothing has ever perplexed me more so than love and death. Money isn't at all as complicated. It's paper, numbers, man made trading tools, but love? It really gets me. Leaves me hot and cold, leaves me hopeless, hopeful, yearning, craving, lost and found, empty and complete all at the same time.

How can something be so simple yet so impossible? Are we doing it wrong? Are we looking in all the wrong places? Are we applying ourselves in all the wrong ways?

This book is about the ways that I have found love through the many perspectives that exist to shine light and ignite a flame. Sometimes that flame burns, scorches, leaves scars but sometimes it unites us with the very part of us, or another that makes us whole.

If you're like me and you're looking for the chord that connects us all in the deepest, most unblemished way then this read might be for you. I have to say however, that the places I sensed might offer the most refined type of love took me into some dark spaces for only in the dark can you see the light. That, in order to decide if all this love is worth it and if it is, how do we find it? And then, how do we keep it?

That very last question. The terrifying contemplation of eternity or infinity where something can LAST FOREVER is in itself, a question that can only be answered by whoever or whatever created this game we're all playing so I guess we're got some digging to do!

WHERE TO START? RIGHT HERE I GUESS!

The story of love belongs to us all but in order to find the deepest layers and truths of it, we've got some journeying back to do. A trip back through time to explore some of the greatest lovers, whether that be biblical, literal, theatrical or mythological - We're going to explore it all and hopefully we can take some of the flavours and feels from them and pour them into our own love lives. God knows we need it!

Before we begin, I will open with a brief précis on why at all I am writing this and what I hope to gain by sharing these words

As some of you know and for those that don't, I am a 40 something woman from UK that has lived all her adult life in Europe where I have studied Philosophy, Psychology and Theology across various differing modalities, levels of academia (my least favourite approach) practices and professional experiences.

I currently live in Cyprus. It's coming up to 4 years now and how my life has changed since we moved here. We've gone from working a decade in the veterinary sector to now running a research insights company that looks at all things 'HUMAN', especially work/ life balance insights, behaviours and psychological insights and a lot of focus groups where we TALK to a lot of people (mainly women - we'd love more men but we obviously can't force you!) about how they FEEL!

I also work in a school with young teens. Probably the most challenging and absolutely the most fun!

What we have found over the last 2 years is, that when discussing the intricacies of WORK / LIFE balance (which we started in the hope to create some great strategies for each individual on a personal level assuming most results would be mental health, anxiety, depression related) what we noticed was this FURY coming from women in particular where they state they are sick of both sides

WORK = "The goddamn patriarch forcing me to spend my day acting and behaving like a man according to male policies. None whatsoever consider women, thus resulting in the main stress factor in their big game of profit and productivity" and

LIFE = Home, families and social, where we are seeing a tremendous rise of women speaking up about the GAPS and their disappointment and resentment that the home life obligations and responsibilities between husband and wife or man woman are not equal.

Many women saying they have reached the point of no return. Their husbands have not only neglected them or disregarded them, they have BROKEN them.

LOVE AND ROMANCE no longer exists in this fast and furious world where women and men in the workplace are 'apparently' considered the same but in the home, it couldn't be further from the truth

We will speak about this as we go as there is a lot to cover and I will at this point stress, this is entirely to look at LOVE from all aspects and angles. I do share some of my opinions but mostly I ask questions. So please know I am only coming at this with perspectives, in the hope to shift the love pendulum back to a place of bliss as right now, we are far away from there.....

How do we get back?

For many, an unpop viewpoint but one that is very necessary because our entire patriarchal framework and societal structure has been built by the book. Entirely created on the basis of the 'WORD' (aka sound). The word being the bible (it's speaks in code / allegories) Like it or not, believe it or not, this is the message and it is fact in every country, continent and each respected version of. Everything is based on the book (our beginnings - light and sound), so we have to start there

I might have come from a place of traditional education and upbringing in the UK, but I have always observed religion and spirituality through my own lens, though historically and for the most part through the eyes of the Church of England Cristianity.

I have also had the experience from a decade living in Spain of the Catholic Roman approach to Christianity, now in Cyprus the Orthodox Christian approach and mingled into all of that, what we like to refer to as the Greco-Roman Pantheonic approach which, come on guy, is clearly just mythological and holds absolutely zero sway with regards to our lives and how we are steered, managed and overpowered AT ALL.

(Or does it?)

After all these years and observations, I have only in the last 2 years struck Gold on figuring it all out and how exactly did I do that?

I READ THE BIBLE!

Old canon and new

Now, don't switch off just yet. I know people get super triggered by bible bashers but I am not your typical bashy type of bible girl, if anything this book is going all in on ALL about the real players of our 'time' and some of them just simply aren't using their real names or standing true to their identities here so this is going to go far out in time right up until the time of NOW to put a bit of a spin on things as if you have like me read the bible, you will see that we are in fact living through the 'END TIMES' - While that sounds super scary, it isn't actually what we think and rather instead, it is all about the end of the illusion. The end of what we thought was real to be replaced by what really is real and in order to get there safely with a clear understanding as to why, this is what this book is all about.

Let's start with the days of the week: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday according to our Western calendars all stem from the grand pantheonic players.

Monday = comes from the Anglo-Saxon 'monandaeg' which is the "Moon's Day" which in Latin (Spanish for example) Monday is Lunes, from the root etymology Luna meaning moon

Tuesday = named after the Germanic god – Tiu (or Twia) god of war and the sky and associated with the Norse god Tyr and is the old Norse equivalent of the Roman Latin god of war Mars. Tuesday in Spanish being Martes (Mars day)

Wednesday = is “Woden’s Day” (in Norse, ‘Odin’), old Norse equivalent of Mercury which is why wednesday in Roman Latin (Spanish) is called Miercoles meaning Mercury day

Thursday= Is “Thor’s Day”, named after the Norse god of thunder and lightning and is the Old Norse equivalent to Jupiter. In Spanish the Latin equivalent for Thursday is Jueves, the symbolic day of Jupiter, ruler of this realm

Friday = Is the day of ‘Freya’ the wife of Woden (Odin) and the Norse goddess of love, marriage and fertility, who is equivalent to Venus, the Roman goddess of love. Friday is also in Spanish known as Viernes (Venus day) who in Greek and as we shall find out below is the known deity Aphrodite

Saturday = Is the day of Saturn. The Roman God of TIME. It is the LAST day of the week. The Hebrews called Saturday the "Sabbath", meaning, day of rest. The Bible identifies Saturday as the last day of the week. The seven-day week originates within ancient Babylon prior to 600 BC, when time was marked with the lunar cycle, which experienced different seven-day cycles. A millennium later, Emperor Constantine converted Rome to Christianity and standardised the seven-day week across the Empire.

It is also curious to note that our calendar months are equally as Romanised yet have seemed to have lost some sense of order with September, October, November and December representing the 9th, 10th 11th and 12th month of the year but in Latin:

SEPT representing siete, sept, sette as SEVEN (7) NOT NINE
OCT representing ocho, huit, otto as EIGHT (8) NOT TEN
NOV representing nueve, neuf, nove as NINE (9) NOT ELEVEN
DEC representing diez, dix, dieci as TEN (10) NOT TWELVE

Where then are the missing months or rather who or what represents them outside of this clearly Greco-Roman manipulation that predated came from Old Norse and AngloGermanic and why is our time being so manipulated?

It is clear as day (pun intended) that the days and months of our calendar are to give honour to mythological deities where against our understanding, we give them rise and power by using their calendars as they are set, yet we're encouraged to believe that myths are all they are. So why are they so iconic and installed in our EVERY DAY lives?

Could it be that actually, they are running the show and that when Constantine converted Rome to Christianity all he actually did was say 'Look over there, not over here' in a bid to enable the power players to thrive while the people, unbeknownst to them were encouraged to worship some false kind of polyGod inventing their own replacement stories for what actually happened?

They've kept 'Christians' in the dark about the truths and confused them as to what is real and ONLY WHEN you read the scriptures and have a clear insight into the 'mythological' pantheons (which I do), will you be able to piece it all together.

The pantheon is alive and well. Rome never fell and the reason Jesus was so clear about his dislike for Rome and the pharisee brotherhood was because he could see straight through it!

Now an add in segment here - “ I wrote this book back in May 2024 and today it is 30/07/2024 where we have just had the Paris Olympic ceremony (The word ‘Olympic’ being an acronym for I COMPLY) where the world has now been left confused as to the bizarre spectacle debacle performed by a bunch of drag queen artists and clowns where they bare faced spewed all over the scene of last supper and turned the ceremony into a satanic sacrificial ritual to honour Zeus (Jupiter) and Venus (Aphrodite) by harnessing our male and female energy to suit their pantheonic purposes.”

Aphrodite in this instance (she has many personifications) being the leader of the transgender movement. Zeus being the ruler of this realm. Plain sight, they let us all know that they they are running the show but they sell us a very different truth by means of publishing a biblical tale, portraying mythology as just a farce - ‘Don’t look here, look there....’ AND SO WE DO!

BUT THE SHOW MUST GO ON

And we are about to see, as stated in the Bible, that the end times really are coming. Rome really is about to fall and with it, the take down of Europe is about to begin.

What then do we do?

Well, given that the majority of the world are too distracted with politics, money and celebrities to see that this war we’re fighting in is actually spiritual, let's figure out what we can do to get on the right side of all of this and start to fix stuff shall we?

Let’s get back LOVE. The real kind. The sacred kind. The kind we all need to strive to reach away from the prying Gods and prowling powers that work against us. The kind of LOVE where we can look back over the course of our life and say sorry to ourselves and those we've perhaps hurt for it was needless and sacrificial and not at all what we are here to be.

The kind of LOVE where we can forgive each other for our wrongdoings and in doing so open up a sublime channel of sacred light and wonder for all of us to exist, where LOVE and not fear or hate reigns supreme, so if like me, you want to see a world full of love again, please read on!

I will at this point stress that given my statements above and all of the content below, my stance on our history is not of sorrow or sadness. I don't reject their presence or influence. I have found much wisdom and love from within the works of the dark forces and I like to consider that all deities are mere streams of God source that trickle down into our realms and byways for our human brains to understand the energy of them, we give them identity, which in turn gives them power.

They become our archetypal egregores that we use to manifest our own energetic signature and how and why we do that is dependent on many cosmic attributes and many personal desires and appetites, but that is all. They hold no more power over us than we do of ourselves and I no longer kneel for anyone but I thank all the protagonists, good and bad for their role in defining who I am and how I chose to love

WE RISE UP

All the pain aside, all the stuff we've gone through, the collection of breakups, trashy relationships, breathtaking rejections, pitiful erections, jealousy, rage and bitter connections all come to a crashing end when we finally rise up and grab it with both hands and a wide open heart.

That thing that most everyone wants, deep down it's all they want but they're too disconnected and afraid to really claim it. They fear if they grab it it would pop and burst all over them and the fear of abandonment makes them hard pass on it.

'It's too much effort. I'm just not that into commitment. I don't do monogamy. I've been hurt too much before. I just don't think that kind of thing's for me. I don't know how to love anyone because no one ever loved me. OK, fine I'll marry you but I'm leaving the divorce tab open just in cases, K?'

WHERE IS THE LOVE? NO, REALLY, I MEAN IT!

Where the hell is this love? I'm not talking about beige love or basic love or fantasy fiction love, flirty love, love Island love, X factor love or soap opera love, meet you outside the chippy after a few rounds and let's see what happens, love. I'm talking REAL LOVE

REAL LOVE

I don't know what that means to you but I know I am prone to go deep but maybe that's needed in order to fish out the gold and capture my treasure chest.

Maybe this story is needed in order for you to put down the beige basic and upgrade to full-bodied sacred.

But, what's the truth about love?

Let's rather consider that the truth can lay in the interpretation of how each reader choses to identify with the truth and take the stories of these Goddesses, Icons and revolutionaries to make their own love story

nothing short of epic

For why are we here if not for love? War? Is all fair in love and war?

LET'S FIND OUT SHALL WE!

THE PRIMORIALS

And so it is that we begin here, on the Island of Cyprus, where the Goddess of love herself, Aphrodite was born. As Hesiod tells us in his Theogony, the birth of Aphrodite was nothing short of spectacular and her life to follow carried suit, blessing with beauty, pleasure, passion and erotica, sensuality, solidarity and love to all those that choose to bask in the brilliance of this divine goddess of amor

The tale begins with the introduction of the primordial Gods Ouranos (God of sky) and Gaia (Goddess of Earth) who brought about night and day, above and below and creating the entire pantheon of those to follow from their love affair so wild yet tender, the Titans were born.

Their son, Cronus, King of the Titans and ruler of the cosmos during the Golden age on advice of his mother, castrated his fathers testicles separating the heavens and earth in an almighty battle in the sky (You think the modern family is dysfunctional, Cronus actually ate his children - devoured them), where upon his fathers falling member, Gaia took the drops of blood that fell from the sky to the Earth and cast them from the land into the merciless sea, where wave upon wave crashing and stirring did some titanic hocus pocus occur and out of the primordial soup was a young maiden created from the immortal flesh and foam of the sky Gods very essence

Aphrodite, the maiden that as the legendary myth would have it, was born out of the sea foam rising from a stirring sea and sky spell and from the blood of her Father Ouranos. The motherless maiden was the last child of the primordial God but by far his most impressive as she rose from the sea a full grown woman, baptised in the waters floating on her scallop shell naked with her long flowing hair intricately draped around her shoulders, breasts and fingers. She doesn't walk but rather flows gracefully from the sea towards the land. Born motherless however and in such provocative circumstances Aphrodite is neither a Titan or a sibling to any of the other ruling Titans and once they fell from power, Aphrodite remained and ruled as one of the chief Gods presiding over Mount Olympus as an Olympian. A Goddess to reign supreme and continues to do so to this day (to those that wish to bow to her)

She is an Earthly Goddess that teaches us about the divine beauty of love in the physical forms expressed via her personified physical presence but she is also the embodiment of her Father, Air God of the skies. She is a Goddess of the celestial realms, here to teach us of the divinity of spiritual love through a higher form of connection where the physical does not need to exist and she is a water Goddess, the highest priestess of sensual expression where the juices are ripe and overflowing, a peach unapologetically ready to burst in the heat of season and she lays proud of her elemental conquests, however they are redeemed

“Have you ever loved so much that the strength and power of your love could move mountains, shatter sound and transcend realms beyond space and time? A love that is so limitless that this earthly place couldn't ever find the words to express its depths and not even the ocean could contain it?”

Well, that's the kind of love she is here to help us reach out and touch, feel, taste, see, hear and then beyond every sense we know, rise above into the heavens where it can live ever after

THE BIRTH AND LIFE OF APHRODITE

The exact detailing of the birth of Venus / Aphrodite (Aphrodite as the Greek embodiment came first before her Roman counterpart later) has been historically recorded and discussed by many over the years but for the purpose of later on in the story revealing her secrets, I am going to go with the detailed version of her birth as depicted by the great painter Sandro Botticelli, who's infamous works entitled 'The birth of Venus c 1484-1486' details the Goddess, newly born and in fully grown state rising on the water on a scallop shell.

To the left of her, the wind god Zephyrus blows her with the wind shown by lines radiating from his mouth. He is in the air and carries her forwards to the shores of earth. To the right of her, a female figure who may be floating slightly above the ground holds out a rich cloak or dress to cover Venus when she reaches the shore.

The Seasons, a group of goddesses known as the Horae, placed a gold crown on her head, and bequeathed earrings of copper and golden flowers, and a golden necklace that drew the eye to her beckoning cleavage and so, Aphrodite was born. She was the Lady of Cythera, the Lady of Cyprus, and the goddess of love.

From birth, the Greek Aphrodite was beloved by all. She calmed the seas, caused the meadows to spring forth with flowers, and the storms to abate. Even wild animals followed her in submission.

Her major symbols include seashells, myrtles, roses, doves, sparrows and swans not forgetting her divine connection to apples and the pomegranate fruit, known for its seductive qualities and the powers of fertility and sexual magic. And it was Aphrodite who was the first to plant the pomegranates on the Island of Cyprus where now in abundance they grow

APHRODITE AND ADONIS

Adonis was one of only two mortals the goddess of love, Aphrodite, ever fell for (the other being Anchises, Aeneas' father). And not only did she love him more gently and more profoundly than anyone before or since – be he a human or a god – she also loved him longer: From the first time she laid eyes upon him to the very last breath Adonis ever drew, some say, even longer than that.

And this is the tale of that love: A myth explaining the cycle of the seasons, a narrative of life and death, a heartbreaking story of the origin of two flowers – the red rose and the anemone

Throughout the life of Aphrodite, it is not at all surprising that there are stories of love to be shared and while stories there are, there is one in particular that stands strong and tall above the rest and that is the story of Aphrodite and Adonis.

The story of Aphrodite and Adonis does not start out as well intended as prior to the birth of Adonis, Aphrodite gets herself into some trouble when an old woman called Cenchreis dares to declare that her own daughter Myrrha was far more beautiful than Aphrodite. Not taking well to this declaration of conflict, Aphrodite punishes the old woman by making her daughter Myrrha fall in love with her very own husband (Myrrha's father), King Cinyras of Cyprus.

One night, Myrrha, overwhelmingly consumed by passion and lust, decides to seduce her father and creeping into his room makes love to him in the dark where no one could see. This went on for some nights until King Cinyras, needing to know who it was that was stealing his sensual essences in the night, brought in a lamp and upon discovering it was in fact his very own offspring that was seducing him, he tried to kill her.

Myrrha escapes however and terrified for her wellbeing she goes into hiding. After some time, she discovers that she is in fact pregnant, with child from her very own father. She prays to the Gods that they offer her salvation. She cries out to them "if you will listen to my prayer, I do not shun a dreadful punishment deserved but now because my life offends the living and dying I offend the dead, drive me from both conditions; change me and refuse my flesh both life and death!"

It would seem that the Gods heard her and decided to offer her solace. They decided to turn her into a Myrrh tree and there she was transformed, her tears turning into drops of Myrrh falling from the tree.

One day, a wild boar in passing pierced the tree with its tusks and the tree cracked open and out fell a baby, a mortal son that was none other than Adonis.

In the beloved care of the Naiads who rushed to protect the child, it would appear that Aphrodite just happened to be passing by that very tree at the time of the young boy's birth so she swept him up adoring the divine child that she now claimed as her own.

She put this adored child into a chest and gave him to Persephone, Goddess of the underworld to care for. Years and years went by and when it was time for Persephone to return Adonis to Aphrodite, she could not give him up. It would seem that both Goddesses were madly in love with this wildly handsome mortal man and so the fight for his love begins

Not able to come to an agreeable decision as to who Adonis would belong to, Aphrodite, the Goddess of love and Persephone, the Goddess of the underworld took their predicament to Zeus to decide for them their fate. Zeus, not willing to cause himself problems in their love affairs passed the concern over to Calliope who decided that Adonis should spent 4 months of the year with Aphrodite. 4 months of the year with Persephone and the remaining 4 months of the year by himself doing as he please. Zeus agreed to this and signed off on the decree and so it was that Adonis became a partershare agreement between these 2 women fighting for his attention

Adonis loved Aphrodite almost as much as she loved him. Remember, she is the Goddess of love so her ability to evoke her power is strong. His mortal powers saw him well in love so much so that he spent his 4 independent months also with Aphrodite and while they were together, the seas, trees and earth flourished and all was harmonious.

Then when it was his turn to spend his 4 months with Persephone in the underworld and he was absent from the earth, all would perish and freeze. Harvest would come to the earth and while the young Adonis was in a slumber with his underworld lover, the earth winter would come and all would die

But $\frac{2}{3}$'s of the year he would spend above on earth with his beloved. And they would roam the earth together, Aphrodite leaving her duties as the guardian of love in pursuit of her endeavors with her beloved mortal man. She adored him so much he was her constant companion, inseparable in all senses they couldn't bare to be apart, so Aphrodite went on the hunt with him.

She warned him however that while it was all very well chasing after the hares and the deers as her friend Artemis had taught her, that perhaps it was best to stay away from the ferocious wild beasts such as the boars where horns and tusks could far do harm. But Adonis didn't seem to pay too much attention to the words of his beloved and one day, his dogs awoke a stirring wild boar.

Adonis pierced the boar with a spear but it came charging after him and penetrating him in the groin, leaving him to die out on the ground

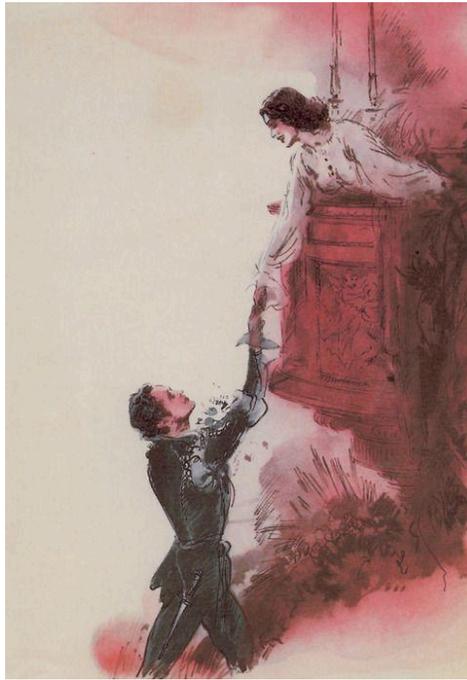

Now, there are various rumors circulating on the exact cause for the wild boars' brutality. It is said that Aphrodite's lover, Eros actually had the powers to transform into a wild boar thus slaying his competitor so he could once again have his lover's full undivided attention all for himself.

The other is that Adonis, so in love with Aphrodite, had one year refused to go down to the underworld for his agreed time spent with Persephone that he was punished by Zeus and cast to the underworld forever. Or could it be that Persephone herself had him killed so that he could remain down there with her in an eternal death away from his true love?

Poor Aphrodite, hearing his groans rushed to her lover but it was too late. Whilst running to him, she pricked her foot on a white rose and covered the flower with her blood turning it red. It is said that the red rose was the first ever to appear on earth symbolizing the painful, enduring love and passion she carried from her heart for her one true love. Upon her anger and fury for her lover being mercilessly taken from her, she sprinkled the blood from her lover upon the sweet nectar of the rose flower and as she did this, her lover began to sparkle and transformed into translucent bubbles that in no time at all the body of her lover morphed into a dark red flower. A flower named anemone (flower of the wind) was born and just like him, it became a flower that is beautiful, slender but sadly short-lived.

ROMEO AND JULIET

It seems like such a cruel act of fate when the paths of true lovers are crossed and that gifted are they to share such enchanted moments in time together, cursed is their time when the winds change and they are set apart from one another and their love stolen and turned into mere memories throughout the passages of time and space

It could be said that the tales of Romeo and Juliet possess a similar fate to that of Aphrodite and Adonis, where they were forced apart by the cruel intentions and merciless acts of others, sending them solitarily through the celestial realms and into the cold deathly underworlds but where regardless of their destination within the cosmos, their love reigns supreme and eternal and shall never be forgotten

We see the same tales with poor Romeo and Juliet, embracing the depths of their unrequited love only to find that death finds them more delightful and steals them from each other in the cruellest of ways

It would seem that the fate of true love is never one with an easy path and the consequences of such a love must be paid in dues to the Gods, for they teach us that nothing in life is eternal but, the lovers teach us that in fact it is for love transcends all realities and passages of time keeping us together in an endless blend of pure and divine union

The thing that we see that really gives substance to the meaning of the love story between Romeo and Juliet is that from the moment that they met, they were in service to each other, understanding the value of their commitment to each other and confirmed through their words of dedication and honour

ROMEO

*“Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap’d like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music’s tongue
Unfold the imagin’d happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.”*

JULIET

*“Conceit more rich in matter than in words,
Braggs of his substance, not of ornament.
They are but beggars that can count their worth;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth.”*

And when Romeo declares his love for Juliet, knowing her worth she asks that he ‘pronounce his love faithfully’ which Romeo in return swears ‘by the moon that he loves her’ but she isn’t satisfied with that response, stating that 'the inconstant moon that monthly changes in its orbit' doesn't have enough of a constant deliverance to satisfy her trust so she suggests he swear by HIMSELF, his gracious self and that should his pledge be true he should request to marry her Romeo in return asks that Juliet does not leave him so unsatisfied. Confused by his remark, she asks 'what satisfaction canst thou have tonight?' to which Romeo responds 'The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine'

As much as Romeo and Juliet professes the meaning of love, it also goes to the other side to depict the tyrannous power of hate and how both these families and their friends entangle each other in their webs of poison, malice and the tragic consequences of bitterness that in the end, due to such conflict leads Juliet to acknowledge

“My only love sprung from my only hate. Too early seen unknown and known too late. Prodigious birth of love it is to me, that I must love a loathed enemy”

Juliet didn't know the identity of her love when she first cast eyes on him and the fateful decision was made. Though she had made that declaration, hate and conflict was not going to stand in the way of her hearts delight

Romeo also stood true to the vows of their marriage after he is exiled for killing Paris, he proclaims

*“More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies than Romeo. They may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who even in pure and vestal modesty
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banishèd.”*

This is where Romeo shows us that through his devastation he considers that he is breaking his pledge of honour and that he would rather die than be banished for his sins than act unfavourably in the absence of his beloved

The final act of Romeo and Juliet shows Juliet, laying in her tomb awaiting her beloved under the instruction of Friar Lawrence, who has given her a sedative to sleep where to others they will believe her to be dead and Friar Lawrence, who delivered the same instructions to Romeo believes that Romeo is aware of this agenda, only he did not receive the letter so he also considers that his beloved really is dead.

When he finds her, he weeps and declares

Ah dear Juliet, why are you still so beautiful? Is invisible death in love with you? Is that hated monster keeping you in this tomb to be his lover? I'm afraid he might be, so I'll stay here with you, and I'll never leave this palace of dim night again. Here, right here, I'll remain with the worms that are your chambermaids now. Oh, here I'll set up my everlasting rest, and I'll shake off the burden of my unlucky fate from my weary body. Eyes, look their last!

Arms, take your last embrace! And lips, with this virtuous kiss seal a contract with death that has no end or limit! Let's go, bitter action. Let's go, guiding hand! Rush on like a pilot driven mad with sea-sickness, crashing a ship on the rocks. Here's to my love! [Drinks] Oh you were a true apothecary! Your drugs work quickly. I'll die with a kiss.

This declaration, a self punishment where he confesses that he has failed his beloved and therefore expects to meet a brutal end, not a heavenly death but one where he will meet God's judgement accordingly. He ends the soliloquy with a farewell to his love where he believes that his and Juliets love will endure death. He views love and death as being intimately linked and forever intertwined. He considers that death has stolen Juliet to keep her there in the tomb forever therefore he must stay there with her to protect her as he promised.

Awakening from her slumber, Juliet witnesses her love and for a moment smiles believing he has come for her as orchestrated but then she notices that he has taken a vial of poison after presuming her dead. Not able to fathom the tragedy of this outcome she takes Romeo's sword and stabs herself, falling onto his body. The two lovers lay in the tomb.

"I see that poison has been his untimely end. Oh you're so selfish! You drank it all, and didn't leave any to help me follow you? I'll kiss your lips. Perhaps there's still some poison that remains on them which will cure me by killing me. Your lips are warm.

Someone's coming? Then I'll be quick. Oh, how lucky to have this dagger!

Let my body be your sheath. Rust there forever, and let me die."

Juliet takes Romeo's dagger and stabs herself, her body falling on her beloved. The 2, sent to the stars for an eternity

The very final speech from Paris, her intended love that she could not accept

“A glooming peace this morning with it brings;

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head.

Go hence to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardoned, and some punished.

For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.”

And after all of that, their love, forever so dutifully bound and pure will dance together in the cosmos and as each age turns, their story will remain one of sovereign, magisterial and bold love that was ordained by them, for them with rules and order from no outside influence. They made their love for each other known only to them and although brief, they stood by their vows and honoured each other until the very end

A message that through all the hate and conflict, when love calls for you and finds you, you cannot send it away regardless of the back story or hardship that might face you upon the pursuit of it. A love that is full of honour and worth, not needing to be validated by anyone else. A love so full of value that the promises made will not be swayed even if you're banished or sent to marry another or even if you are sent to death

Now, before I move on to the next LOVE DUO, I want to spend a moment having a bit of a retrograde back to my first ever serious love, Anthony. We were 17 /18 I believe? It was 1997 and I was living in Chichester studying art.

He was studying Business. 2 very different people yet how I loved him though I suppose I was so young I wasn't really sure what that meant. Yet, it was the year that Baz Luhrman's ROMEO AND JULIET was coming out and I was beyond excited about this and let everybody know!

Romeo and Juliet has always held such magic to me for as long as I can remember and this boy, WOW, he made serious efforts to bring the romance here. For my 18th birthday, he went into blockbuster video rentals and PURCHASED their ONLY rental copy of the movie. He paid a pretty penny for their only copy so that I could have this tale of LOVE

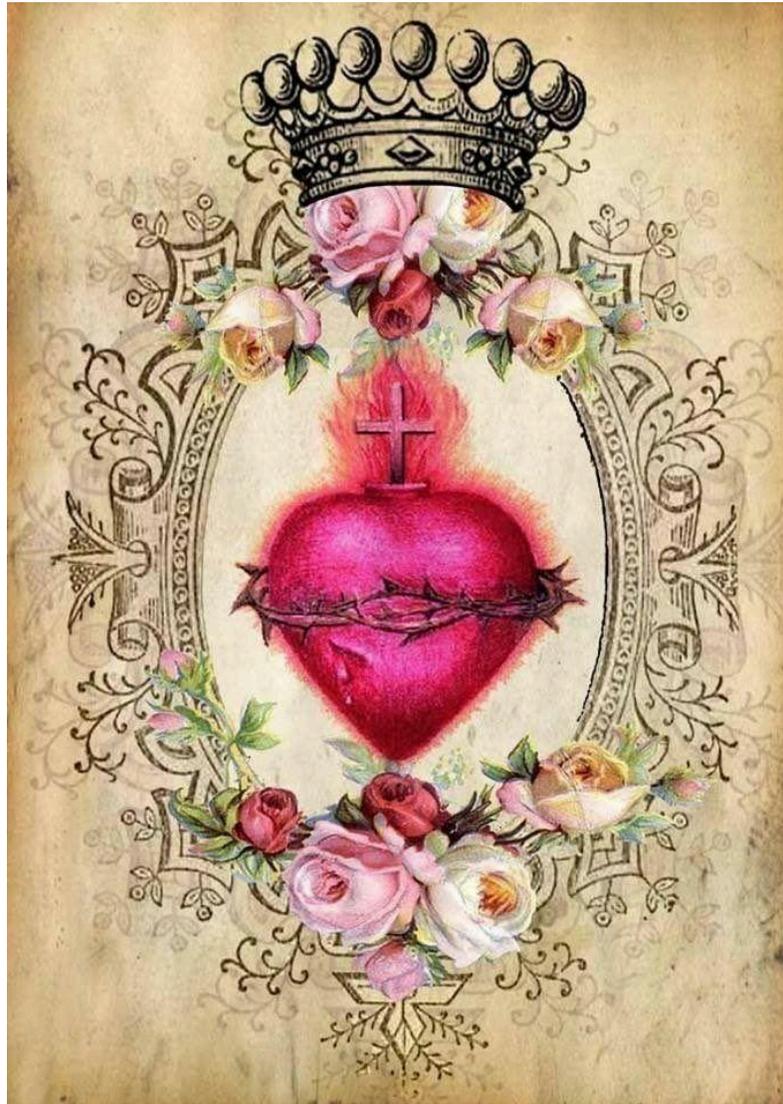

Do 18 year old boys still do this? I was blown away and still to this day as a middle aged woman I tell this story to people because it was an act of TRUE LOVE from someone so young and impressionable.

We didn't last but we're still friends. Time and distance got in the way yet he once gifted me a teddy bear, FATTY it was called, to hug and hold in his absence. I still have that teddy bear today and my youngest looks after it for me

A love I remember fondly and only hope my own daughters get to experience something similar! Anthony, you were an absolute sweetheart, my first true love!

MARY MAGDALENE AND JESUS

Perhaps one of the most famous love unions to this day in the predominantly Western world and parts of Middle East, is that of Mary Magdalene and Jesus Christ.

A story that still remains quite unanswered and unclear as to the exact details but very much the same in that theirs was a divine connection. A union that the mortal mind cannot comprehend yet taken from her, she was left to suffer alone without her love.

The Immaculate Heart of Mary refers to Mary's interior heart, which remained sinless and devoted to God despite the challenges and sorrows she encountered on earth.

The popular depiction of the burning heart on fire with the sword pierced through it was a prominent feature in Baz Luhrmann's 1996 portrayal of Romeo and Juliet where Juliet surrounds herself with the symbolic Roman Catholic shrine artefacts belonging to Mary.

The shrine symbolises the feminine tower created to inaugurate her powers and strengthen her kingdom under the divine protection of the Magdalene. "woman of Magdala," from Aramaic (Semitic) Maghdela, place on the Sea of Galilee, literally meaning "tower"

In the universal image and symbol of the heart on fire cut by the sword, it shows us that the flame emanating from her heart burns with love for Jesus and for us all. The sword represents Mary's sorrow at Jesus's suffering and his departure from her and all of us as he is taken from this life, while the rose symbolises her immaculate conception, sinlessness and purity

Now, I'm not going to go too deep into the Mary Magdalene, Jesus story as it's not as open as the others and often triggers people. (I wonder why?) They're for sure the most controversial couple to have ever lived but, I will say this:

Some say Jesus' identity holds parallels to the Greek god Adonis. Apparently, Jesus was referred to as "Adonai" in the Bible, a Hebrew word meaning "Lord" or highest god. I'm not entirely sure this is true given that Yahweh was also referred to as Lord and Adonai in the bible so it begs us to question the true identity of those ruling elites and decipher exactly who was who.

Secondly, the cave site sanctified as Jesus' birth in Bethlehem was a pre-existing sacred site of worship dedicated to Adonis.

Thirdly, blood-red anemones sprang up on the hill on which Jesus was crucified, just as they sprang from the blood of Adonis when Aphrodite blessed his blood in memorial

Again we see the same themes and replays of the rose, sword and crown, bleeding hearts and lovers sacrificed to the Gods but onwards they live in the form of flowers in the fields, trees, mountains and breeze

BLAKE

Where I am from in the UK, we have a deep connection to the song Jerusalem.

Not many know why, the answers might lay in the writing of one of England's most famous writers / poets William Blake where he writes 'The emanation of the giant Albion' a complex piece of masterful literature that was misunderstood by most and criticised for being too baffling, harrowing and incomprehensible.

I feel I have to defend Blake on this one as there's no easy peasy, sugar coated way to address what is probably the most consequential piece of historical and theoretical literature pertaining to the message of God by which he details that the marriage of heaven and hell can only come from a divine vision, a spiritual redemption, a salvation but only after a resurrection.

With Jerusalem divided into four chapters, Blake goes in hard on first of all on the public, the meek and mild taking the first punch but what do they know for they are in a deep slumber unable to awaken.

Then he heads straight on over to the Jews, suggesting that they have defiled the pure true form of what the Albion, the Universal human represents, suggesting that they have impacted the human form with sin and retribution.

Then he moves over to the Deists, those that have turned their backs on divinity to follow a code of scientific conduct to rationalise God where instead of reaping spiritual reward, they glory Gods that honour them with material premium. A false system of backwards principle.

Ah but then he heads for the Christians. The group I feel got the most of a bashing. Here he suggests that this group of people are the most corrupt for distorting their religious moral compass turning a christed albion of love and forgiveness into one of sin and retribution. That the God they pray to is not the God that serves the kingdom of the most high and instead they have rejected brotherly love within their 'brotherhood establishments' and rather infiltrated them with ego, selfishness, greed, pride and will to power, also very much like what Nietzsche had to say on the matter.

He was however very hopeful that there would come a time, where after such an apocalypse of confusion and catastrophe (think end times and revelations) that the nations would rise again and the 'lost tribes' would be once again purified and resurrected into their divine form but not before man finds his own identity and seeks imagination by which he can look further and higher from the bland worldly visions set upon them by the lowest form of oppressive influence

The reason I bring this up is because, in England we have all the necessary tools and seeds planted for us to question the deeper meanings, though no one really pays enough attention.

In every city, town, village there are public houses and halls available to all that are names accordingly - The Red Lion, The Royal Oak, The Crown, The White Hart, The Unicorn, The Rose and Crown, The White Horse, The Kings Head, The Kings Arms, The Swan, The Queens Head, The Plough, The Wheatsheaf, The Fox and Hounds, The White Lion, The George and Dragon, The Crosskeys, The Nags head.....Need I go on?

These are all symbolic of a fall from heaven via times of conflict, where paganistic influence rose up to replace divine ordain (not bashing that at all there's much I love about our pagan roots, I suppose you can tell given my knowledge on such things) but that since then, religions were formed from the very spark of pagan influence and as spoken by Blake, they replaced what is divine yet speak of divinity as if those words give it breath and life and that we are living the divine order through the Church. Not at all. We are deceived.

MANY CHURCHES - FEW DISCIPLES

The time will come if it is not already here to realise that the sacrifice of Jesus was issued to humanity to seek remission. To take out the sword from the heart of suffering and mend the bleeding wound. To straighten up her crown and in doing so straighten up our own and to seek back the love that most are too afraid to find so that we can fix our broken Kingdoms

On a side note and one that might raise eyebrows but remember, I am a theorist, not a factist, 2020 hits.

This virus that worldwide spreads and is named as a CORONAVirus. Corona means Crown. Could it be that this divine reuniting has already started to occur and the wars we see, the collapses, the tower crumbling are all playouts to show us that we have been controlled by oppressors and that it is time for us to rise?

FIX YOUR CROWNS KINGS AND QUEENS

But True Kings and Queens know that their Crowns are not jewels that sit sweetly on their heads but are made up of their souls

Yes, it will take imagination to seek a higher world from the one we have been trapped in, veiled only to see and fathom that which is here and look no further.

As Blake said, we have replaced the invitation for union by instead playing characters of mythological Milieu, dismissing Jesus as a "Phantom of the overheated brain"

I always love to look back on where we have come from, individually and collectively to find the magic in those times and pay it honour for allowing it to elevate me to a higher state for were it not in knowing where we come from can we have an idea of where we might be heading?

I have often considered that we are leaving an age of deep religious doctrine to move into something more pagan and pantheonic but in actual consideration, I feel like that's perhaps what we're leaving behind.

The Titans are alive and well. Rome never did fall and all the players in mythological context are all very present, rather switching their identity for one of religious influence to prevent us from seeing who was really in control for if we could, we might reject it in favour of something less harmful. Let's be honest, the Gods didn't play nice and they weren't that into peace

I feel like that was why Jesus paid the price. The prince of peace set us free so that we might ascend to a kingdom higher than the one cloaked by a pantheon of colonial sky Gods. And our skies right now with all their chemical artistry raise to question the natural influence of anything within this realm - tongue in cheek

Also interesting to note that: Jesus / Dionysius, turned water into wine.. Bacchus, turned water into wine. They're all deities so 'which one is the right one?'

The texts introduced Jesus as the saviour but which one? Dionysius, much like Jesus was known to be 'born twice' and to be the god that brings the dead back to life. The dying and rising god.

The complexities between myth and religious texts are polarised for a reason. To confuse and divide us and give our power away. Careful who you pray to for no-one knows for sure who's the 'saviour' if one exists at all

AGAIN, ALSO TONGUE IN CHEEK

I remember never being afraid to fly as a child but once I got older, there was something remarkably odd about being up there.

My husband will tell you, I am the WORST person to fly with. I have been known to ask for credentials and time in employment (I wish I were joking) and I'm not much of a drinker so finding ways to numb me out is tricky so he often finds a spare seat and leaves me to it pretending he doesn't know me at all :) but one of my fears is that I don't trust humans.

Then I question if pilots really are humans and they're not some AI NPC and if so, what's to stop them from trying to pierce the stratosphere and if so, how high can we go before we get into trouble? Would there be a divine intervention? What is up there further beyond the veil?

And I have spent years in my far outness (I'm an incredibly grounded observer with a good 360 understanding of what's going on around me) but I do travel to the weirdness often and I have been known to tell people I can fly.

"Where we're going we don't need roads" I am a female modern Doc and that planes are for losers.

So then, when we go to our favourite pier for sea jumping, why am I the only one that refuses to launch? Even granny's thrown herself off it's really not that high! But then my friend Linda said to me 'Honey, we don't fall, we rise' - And it started to make a little sense.

If, as we will see below, the fallen ones did indeed 'come down', then the way back up again is.....?

The resurrection, the purification, the reunion can only occur once we give ourselves permission to LOVE unconditionally, unselfishly, without ego or conflict, without falsehood or illusion. With as much of your pure self as you can possibly fill inside the cup and remember, it was Jesus that said of the Pharisees and Sadducees (Jews)

'Hypocrites! They clean outside of the cup and dish, but inside they are full of greed and self-indulgence. Beware of the yeast of the Pharisees as they teach a deceit'

Funnily enough, if you watch the new series Kaos, referencing the rise and fall of the ego God daddy Zeus, we see that his son Dionysus is the very one to topple him. Dionysus, protector of mere mortals, prostitutes and all things LOVE. Sound familiar?

So the message of the Magdalen and her Christ was to rise above the many faced Gods for the one supreme that they are all the sons and daughters of has a kingdom that awaits you where your love can be eternal. Do not be deceived and give your love or power away to anyone unworthy for it will break your heart to a million pieces

LOVE BETWEEN GODS AND MORTALS

We have seen through the stories of Aphrodite, the goddess who falls in love with a mortal man that death comes quickly to separate the love between any lover whether immortal or made in flesh.

We see this also with the stories of Jesus, God's only begotten son, who was cast down to earth as God's only human son to pay a divine wager from Yahweh, (Jupiter / Zeus / Anu / Enlil) God of Earth gifted his inheritance by El Elyon.

Jesus came and paid the ransom via the contract "Matthew 5.17 THE FULFILMENT OF THE LAW" (Yahweh's law over his people) where he states "Do not think I have come to abolish the law or the prophets. I have not come to abolish them. I have come to fulfil them." And with this, Jesus sets the whole of humanity free from the sins and restraints set upon us by the overlord.

Yahweh took the right seat of the Father, therefore ruling over all of us, destroying any divinity we had turning us into slaves for his own purpose but Yeshua let's Yahweh kill him so that he can pay the fee to set us free, hence why he now sits at the right hand of the Father - (WE ARE FREE)

Upon paying this wager, he departed from this earth, leaving behind a grieving mortal woman, Mary, who suffered the pain, torment and loss of her one true love. Let's not romanticise this 360, as where I'm sure they were truly in love as lovers often are, Mary was also Jesus's mother and her immaculate conception can be explained in this way:

NEPHILIM

Ah, the Nephilim much like the Annunaki are terms that trigger people as most don't have a clear understanding of their true meaning. So let's take a look:

Nephilim means "The one that has come down from above" - It DOES NOT mean "The fallen one". Please let this be known. They are not sinful. They ARE the Annunaki. The Annunaki came down from above and the Nephilim is simply the name for the species thus created

The church Fathers were in agreement that the Greek and Roman Pantheon of Gods lived at that time. They were not Mythological whatsoever. They were the Nephilim talked about in Genesis Chapter 6. They ARE the Annunaki

When we looked at the curse that Aphrodite placed on Cenchreis and her daughter Myrrha, it was argued that the King that the daughter slept with was not the King of Cyprus but was actually the King of Assyria, Theias. (I prefer the version that I detailed as it seems the most accurate given my research and the players involved at the time and place) but, the Assyrians at that time were known as the first order way before the old testament and New testament came to manifest.

They were the order known as the Sumerians. See, our human history is only a tiny part in a colossal history of pantheons, whether Sumerian, Phoenician, Mesopotamian, Egyptian then morphing into later forms of Christianity, Muslim and Islam.

With that said, if then later after the Sumerian reign, Yahweh, according to the old testament marched the Egyptians out and in to the desert (I won't detail what he did but he ain't no clean spirit) but as the story goes, if Yeshua really did come down to earth to fulfil a wager to free us all from the clutches of 'Gods not so nice other son' - Then as a Nephilim, a divine son of God turned mere mortal to pay the bill, then the consummation with an earthly woman such as Mary could be explained as the virgin birth was nothing more than a hybrid between an elohim / angel and God / earthly Father. Are we all hybrids? Children of the divine blended with mortal flesh beings?

Or, even better yet and as depicted in Carlo Crivelli's 'The Annunciation' where we are shown a light ray being emitted from the sky to represent Mary receiving Jesus Christ into her womb by the Holy Spirit.

Just to put it out there but the picture also depicts the light beam coming from a craft like object that has led many to question whether the birth of Jesus could have come from another realm or ET / paleo contact but if we're really going there, the whole of the Old Testament is pouring with reference to craft, ET contact and draco-reptilian themes (Yahweh known to be the leader of House of the Dragon) and we see in Ezechiel 10.9 detailed descriptions of cherubim craft with four wheels that 'sparkled like chrysolite' and that hovering above the clouds moved in various directions.

The sound of the 'whirling wheels' each wheel having a face. One a cherub, one the face of man, one a lion and one an eagle. The eagle represents a very Zeus-like interpretation of the sumerian like dragon. Either way, a sky warrior of sort

The reason for mentioning these things is to 'shed light' (no pun intended but maybe a little) on our origins because if we come from star systems or far away galaxies, could it be that our love lives here are subconscious holographic imprints of whatever divine love or greater love is expressed elsewhere in a differing form?

And if that's the case, was Jesus not encouraging us to be like the light he is and LOVE as deeply as we can so that we might manifest heavenly love here on earth rather than earthly love, which is limited and devilish with broken parts and rivers of pain and blood running through it?

Do you ever wonder, if your partner were to die and you then take another, to be reunited in the heavens then when you both reach that point, who then do you spend eternity with should that be a thing? Like, ones there waiting for you to join him but you since moved on so...will be either awkward or cosy group love in eternal afterlife 🤔

I'm merely reflecting on possibilities but nonetheless possibilities of love far reaching and far extending that of 'LOVE ISLAND AUSTRALIA' or Friday night 'Blind Date' with Cilla Black.

That immense love. That seemingly unattainable love. How do we obtain it? Is it even human and if not, what then does that mean in further context?

I might point out that the artwork above of the Christ light has the words LIBERTAS ECCLESIASTICA which translates (libertas ecclesiae) to mean freedom to accomplish its spiritual mission without interference from any secular power.

Christ did not want us to worship him or any religious governance. He wanted us to follow in his teachings. What they were is for each alone to seek. Seek and ye shall find

THE GREAT WAR

It is said that according to prophecy, God will come and reclaim his children. The pantheon according to Greco-Roman theology speaks of exactly what is referenced in the holy bible. That a time will come where tribulations will attest to our suffering, hardships and trials and that at the end times, a great war will play out to separate the wheat from the shaft. How such terror will reign but that God's children will be saved from the wrath and will rise up to the kingdom of heaven.

When we look at what is expected for us to be saved from such terror, the one thing that is constant and never faulting is that we are asked to LOVE. This love is not a love of flesh and blood. It is a love that transcends the physical.

Isaiah 62:5 - For as a young man marries a young woman, so shall your sons marry you, and as the bridegroom rejoices over the bride, so shall your God rejoice over you.

Proverbs 12:4 - An excellent wife is the crown of her husband, but she who brings shame is like rottenness in his bones.

Ephesians 5:31 - "Therefore a man shall leave his father and mother and hold fast to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh."

Psalms 85:10 - Steadfast love and faithfulness meet; righteousness and peace kiss each other.

1 Peter 4:8 ~ Above all, keep loving one another earnestly, since love covers a multitude of sins.

Colossians 3:14 ~ And above all these put on love, which binds everything together in perfect harmony.

John 13:34-35 ~ A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another: just as I have loved you, you also are to love one another. By this all people will know that you are my disciples, if you have love for one another.”

1 Corinthians 16:14 ~ Let all that you do be done in love.

Ephesians 5:25 ~ Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her

Let us look at the last quote from Ephesians.

The message here is that Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her. Look back to the passage about Mary Magdalene and how in Aramaic language, the Magdalene IS the tower. It is the temple she built and Christ died so that we can rebuild our temples out of everlasting love.

This everlasting love does not come from temptation of the flesh but in pure divine love, so lovers, choose your love wisely.

Choose to love another from heart and soul where one day if one becomes sick and in need of your support you can offer it without judgement, criticism, disappointment or rejection for we are not here to satisfy only the beautiful parts of love but also the hard parts, difficult and tragic parts that are sent to test our love and see we can really stand true to what we promise, not only to one another but to God.

When Jesus was delivered as the begotten son, he was offered to Mary, mortal woman, also known in 27.56 as 'The other Mary', portraying every title to Jesus and she was washed of her sins. It is said that sinlessness is nothing more than freeing ourselves from the bondage of the 'Gods that claim to rule this earth', hence the passage below about our wrestle being against the cosmic powers and authorities that reside over us.

It then came to pass through what is known as 'The assumption of Mary', that she transcended the physical human flesh and blood bonds and followed Christ on his journey into the 'Kingdom of the Father' aka the realm above the one we live in where we are veiled in the darkness of the Earth Gods that rule over us.

Understand though that every subdominion of Christianity has its own opinion on this and there is much disagreement as to what is the truth.

In orthodox we see that they claim Mary fell asleep and didn't actually die. The Dormition of the Theotokos, the falling asleep of the Mother of God. But her body – like His – was afterwards raised from the dead and she was taken up into heaven, in her body as well as in her soul. She has passed beyond death and judgement and lives wholly in the Age to Come. The Resurrection of the Body ... has in her case been anticipated and is already an accomplished act.

That does not mean, however, that she is dissociated from the rest of humanity and placed in a wholly different category: For we all hope to share one day in that same glory of the Resurrection of the Body that she enjoys even now.

In effect, that is why Jesus was crucified, so that he could free us as slaves and we could also transcend out of this hell

And that said, doesn't it strike a resemblance to the new and popular concept of multidimensionality? That she was here, now is there, surpassing death, resurrected and whole in mind, body and spirit in an 'AGE TO COME'

I have spoken a lot about the multidimensional individual and collective. I have gone deep into the notion that there are many parallel versions of us that exist across unlimited realms of time and space and only once we ascend can we put all the pieces together to connect a whole.

It's strange. It's almost inhuman. It's a concept that isn't hugely relatable and scares a lot of people though it is one we must have for it opens worlds, literally. Like the transcending of Jesus and his mother Mary. Seek and ye shall find

The same must be said of the truth of love. We are in a war. How do we stop this bloody war and find peace?

Ephesians 6:10-13

Finally, be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might. Put on the whole armour of God, that you may be able to stand against the schemes of the devil. For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the cosmic powers over this present darkness, against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly places. Therefore take up the whole armour of God, that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand firm.

So what we are being asked to do in terms of marital partnerships, is to commit to one another as divine partners. Showing only marital love to one another, not committing adultery or fornication of the flesh.

Where our love in the physical is sacred and unified through a blessed connection and not one of flesh temptation. I might add at this point for those that are looking to enter into a sanctified partnership and commitment of marriage, maybe leave the p*rn in the past as bringing that into a divine agreement isn't the message here.

Listen, why am I saying this? There are many that say, 'Come on, we're living in 2024. The bible? Seriously?' and you can absolutely make your choices according to your own values and standards but, take a look at the world around you. Where everyone is struggling. Money rules above and beyond everything else. Temptation of the flesh is everywhere.

The 'Gods' the bible speak of being wary of are the pantheonic Gods. The ones that predated the 'story of Jesus' that we seem to consider mythological. If you know these Gods, and I'm pretty sure you do, you will know they often aren't clean players. Well, it's a duality. They come in all shades and sizes and as much as I don't practise 'worship' of them, they do come with some pretty strong messages that do help us to discern values, morals and the meaning of life from a whole range of perspectives.

Zeus hates humans. He's a primordial immortal high order. Ruler of the pantheon and father to many. He's not a great Dad. I mean, he's eaten many of his kids and all throughout the olympic games we all play with them (and don't kid yourself, we all do) we are encouraged to behave just like them.

They love their games. Eating kids, paedophilia, blood sacrifice, sex rituals etc are what the bible warns us against. Stay clean and level up. Rise above the immoral codes of conduct of these base level players and you will also, like Mary, rise up into your multidimensional self

I have mentioned prior that Dionysus, son of Zeus is also akin to Jesus for Dionysus loved the humans, stood up for them and helped them clean up their sins (Sin in Spanish means 'without'. If you are without, you are not within. You are lacking) So they could rise up into the power that they've been led to believe we don't have....but, continuing on...

The problem is, our society is entirely structured to 'play the games'. It's why porn is free, drugs are everywhere, nasty nasty behaviour is totally the norm.

Furthermore, we have the programming starting young!

I remember my best friend posting a reel from a child psychologist in the UK where she was going through the differences between girls clothes and boys clothes. She basically said that the cutesy animals on girls clothes were predominantly bunnies, kittens, puppies, deers and butterflies, whereas boys clothes were lions, dinosaurs, sharks and wolves

Listen, I'm not going to get too crazy about this my daughter loved sharks when she was little and walks around in Machine Head t-shirts but, the takeaway of the message was, that boys are encouraged to dress and act like predators, while girls are encouraged to dress and act like prey

I see the point. It's a bit of a stigma to think that society is being divided into 'hunger games' style sex wars from such an early age. I mean, I never did any of this. They wore what they wanted without it being a concern but it is a concern if there's a deliberate attempt to play off each side.

And we see this also as we get older. Everything is divisive, especially when it comes to sex. You have to look and act a certain way if you want to pass the societal test and it's just bullshit.

In America, all the movies about mean girls, jocks, popular kids, nerds, sororities OMG it's a literal war being played out for us all to watch and then as stupid shits, we bring it into our sphere of reality and copy it!

THIS is what we're being warned against.

LEVEL THE F UP!

I was mid range popular at school though I couldn't have given a crap if I was or wasn't and I am still friends with everyone from my year whether they were princesses or uber geeks. Makes no odds to me

The VALUE of a person is not and should never be about how pretty they are. How much money they have. What connections they have....ugh, GO DEEPER!

CULTURAL NORM

If she's not hot, she's not got it! Husbands googling Russian girls or Austrian milk maids. Swedish blondes and cheerleaders. Cheering for what exactly?

I'm no prude but, these are questions that we need to ask ourselves before we enter into a marriage with another. Can we be faithful? Can we commit to a life with a person where if that person puts on a little weight, shows a little mood, loses a little money or God forbid gets sick and requires care and assistance can we look beyond what we think is important aka the physical meat and money matters and find absolute pure and unconditional love for that person regardless of all the distraction?

Be honest? Don't lie to yourself. Forsaking all others, could you commit your life to the service of that other in love and unity until death do you part?

This is what is being asked of you yet divorce, adultery, lies and cheating have become such a norm in our cancel culture. Many will ask 'Does he have enough money?' 'Does she have the good looks?' 'How easy will this be and how happy will it make me?' based upon things that are always subject to change and are never certain.

Upsettingly, divorce lawyers and marriage counsellors will say so easily, 'If its not working, quit.' and will steer many into giving up and walking away from marriage agreements and the only person that will really benefit will be them for the bills that are settled for them to offer council yet it is not for them to decide the fate of lovers.

So yes, the grand pantheon is out there influencing us all and if you want to take the bait, that's up to you! Their lessons can be fun, edgy, dark, mysterious, sometimes even wonderful (cos nothings always just evil right) so, observe but don't absorb.

Interestingly, bringing in the perspective of the New Testament covenant and commandments as spoken about by Jesus Christ, he says this of divorce:

When he was asked by the Pharisees in Mark 10.2, 'Is it lawful for a man to divorce his wife?' Jesus responded to them 'What did Moses command you?' and they responded 'Moses permitted a man to write a certificate of divorce and send it away.' to which Jesus responds ' It was because your hearts were hard that Moses wrote this law. But at the beginning of creation God 'made them male and female' For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife and the two will become one flesh. So if they are no longer two but one. Therefore what God has joined together, let no man separate. '

He went on to say that 'Anyone who divorces his wife and marries another commits adultery against her.

I understand that in this brutal day and age it is all too tempting sometimes to run from what seems broken, destructive and unwanted and I do not condone anyone to stay in a marriage that is harmful but far from me to judge or condemn, that's not my intention but CHOSE WISELY when you make the decision to marry under the eyes of God for it is not a contract to take lightly or through misted vision or false pretence

It is too easy to walk away and many will tell you, the grass is not always greener and the path is not always paved with better riches, bigger houses or better boobs. Blessed are they that work together to find solutions to their worldly problems under the divinity of the most high

Now, Aphrodite being the Goddess of love, for sure she could tempt you into some fun times. She had them herself claiming many a lover and often multiple at a go but, the message of her and Adonis is that in him she found her union. In him she created a love so divine and pure it made headlines in the stars and changed the course of love and the meaning it portrayed. She gives you an option, as with all Gods that preside over us they all give you the choice as they themselves were created by the most high.

So sure, we can see Aphrodite as a man eating whore only out for her own flesh gains and fancies but we can also see her as someone who found love. True love. Pure love. It merely depends on your own interpretation and what it is that you're looking for. The problem is, I don't think anyone really knows. They just want whatever's easy and available.....Too harsh?

There is talk of a trinity. A holy trinity has become a popular focal point amongst theologians and lovers of spiritual debate, but nowhere in the bible is there mention of a trinity.

There is however mention of a divine council. That divine council hosts all members of our pantheon and beyond whether they are bad players or good. The messages that they chose to portray via their earthy and heavenly games are to be decided by us and taken by us both literally, allegorically and metaphorically to put into practice how we chose to live our lives.

The purpose of coming here and speaking so much about biblical text and reference is because if you are about to enter into a marital partnership, I beseech you to understand why you are doing it in the most sacred of ways so that this cancel culture that has fast become a popular place in our society can no longer exist amongst us for it damages our homes, our hearts and our children's futures.

It is undeniable that the pains we are suffering stem from years of abuse where we have succumbed to easy love, fast love, empty love, damaging love, controlling love, giving ourselves away to pointless situations and vague scenarios that taint our presence and leave cuts and bruises that someone else down the line will have to pick up and fix.

We need to start getting clear and strong about what it is we want out of life and love if we want it to last and have meaning.

Money will come and go, as will your good looks and the hardships of life will show on your face or on the hearts of your beloveds but will you look beyond them and smooth them over with grace always striving for a more sacred outcome or will you quit each other and fall prey to repeating cycles over and over again until we learn to love each other truly?

THE GREAT WAR is exactly this - Such fun!

Matthew 10.34

Not Peace, but a Sword (The one pierced through Mary's heart and all of ours)

“Do not think that I have come to bring peace to the earth. I have not come to bring peace, but a sword. For I have come to set a man against his father, and a daughter against her mother, and a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a person's enemies will be those of his own household.

Many question how Jesus, the prince of peace could be so cruel. But the message here is that the sword is to be used to cut away anything that delivers us away from the most high and that between man and God we must sit down and count the cost of our blessings and our troubles. What serves stays, what no longer serves leaves. The choice is yours!

HEAL

The great war is between each man and God to discover and in union with a partner we have someone there to bare witness, to enjoy the ride with or to suffer the price depending on how we chose to value our path and place.

For most right now with so much mounting external pressure, cost of living (I mean, the title of that alone COST.OF.LIVING.....is a pretty darn heavy life question that we're all being asked to account for) and many get swallowed in the ocean of self-pity, self-doubt, self-concern, self-abuse and they can't see beyond their worldly troubles that all consume them.

This is one of the most fundamental wars within marriages and partnerships because it divides and harms and no one seems to win because, fundamentally they are focused on the wrong things

Yes, of course we still need to earn money to pay the dues, the bills, put food on the table and shoes on our kids feet but have constant faith that there is a higher guidance and a more loving outcome and don't stay in fear and all of those things as hard as they seem at the time will no longer weigh on you when you know you are divinely protected and that better days lay ahead

Stay focused on LOVE. Stay focused on the one you chose to embrace this journey with and the children that may have come from this union that you have made. Don't get distracted. Don't give up!

You may read this and feel fury because you ended up committed to a person that treats you badly and all you want to do is leave. You may read this and think that I am crazy for suggesting you stay in a marriage with someone you have learnt to despise and contest because they don't align with your morals and values. I ask you then, why did you enter into it?

I ask this to people often and it's not always met with gratitude but, we always find ourselves in situations that we subconsciously seek to experience. This looks different for everyone.

It could be you are experiencing recurrent financial troubles, health concerns, self-sabotaging loops, sexual abuse, issues with friends and family....The list goes on

But deep down (literally) we chose these experiences (I know, you don't want to hear that) and when people ask me 'WHY THE F*CK would I have chosen an abusive marriage?) The answer to that would be 'To find out how to heal it' - That might mean you need to learn to stand up for yourself. (We find many victims of abuse struggle with this) and either walk away or fix it (the latter often not an option). It is to find empowerment so you can really shift and transform your reality.

Sometimes, being in hurtful, fragile situations are the poison that is also the remedy. Yes, it would be wonderful if we could all live in a world where this level of abuse didn't exist. That's why we do healing work and attempt to create awareness to break this down so we can flush it away and for all those that might be reading this thinking 'Yeah easy for you to say. You've obviously never experienced this level of trauma' - You'd be wrong. And here I stand and say it's very possible to shift and transform your life. Not easy, but possible.

If you're interested in looking into ROOT CAUSE healing work and going right back to the beginning, you can read my book or do my self-guided course DEAR CHILD where I journey right back to the beginning with you to help you connect the dots, see the patterns and heal the past

I am not saying btw that anyone in an abusive marriage should stay if they are being harmed but rather that the act of knowing why you were ever in that commitment in the first place needs to be made clear.

Then when you know why and what the solution is, whether that is to fix the problem or walk away from it, from there, one must come with a clear conscience to only commit to someone that you know can provide you with a safe and stable way to form a union.

More often than not, we repeat cycles over and over because we refuse to look at the very things that have caused us pain because we deny them out of victimhood, shame, guilt, pride, ego and other worldly 'sins' and rather than turn them upside down, right way up, we abandon them and continue on in a state of unconscious torment and disconnect.

Noone is perfect. That is the very point. We can only do good by aiming to be the best we can be through honour and faith. This doesn't mean going to church. Forget the church. YOU ARE the church but go through life pleasing the most high whilst pleasing the person that you have chosen to go through this journey with no matter how hard it gets or how easy it might seem to just run away and call it quits or find a greener pasture.

Should this be a two way street? No one in a marriage is superior to another. Balance means you are both equal, right? The opposite to the book where the word tells us that first came man, then came the subservient wife to honour the man. Please NO! Half of 360 = 180. Each 180 must give and take in balance in order for the 360 to be a harmonious flow

MARS VERSUS VENUS

Still to this day the visual percentages look something like:

MAN = 270 - WOMAN = 90

Yet WOMAN works 270 - man 90 because the woman must also bring the bacon, run the house, kids and meet the husband's needs (often the additional child) because a man shouldn't do these things. He's a man.

Sadly however, it is women that have raised these men and allowed for the goddamn imbalance. It's not just the man's fault, it's the fault of this outdated false pretence that men are to be served on for all the splendour they provide and women are the ones that must cater to that. Oh how we've been fooled!

MOTHERS: Daughters are not a place to store your out-dated traumas or a place to outsource the parenting of your sons!

I know many women, some mothers, some not, that would LOVE to embrace the housewife role. They honestly cannot think of a better way to spend their time than creating a space for them and their beloved (and kids if they exist).

Yet society has really doomed these women and dumbbed them down into a category of low, idle women good for nothing more than staying home. Unachievers that couldn't nor wouldn't amount to anything in the important world outside their pointless house

As a wife and mother I detest this outlook. I work, inside and outside my home but sometimes wish I had enough money to be able to seize the day at my leisure and walk about my home with pride, decorating, filling spaces with love, sitting for a cuddle on my couch with my children and animals, baking something incredible for everyone to enjoy when the sun goes down and there's only us. A cosy home for all of us away from the wicked world outside

WHY SHOULD ANYONE BE SHAMED FOR WANTING THAT?

Yet it's hard to achieve when everyone's out, scattered. This house is more like a bus stop or drop in centre than it is a peaceful, relaxing home. My husband last week had a nervous breakdown because the side unit by the front door was covered in wires, plugs, cartons, inner content of school bags and a scattering of dog biscuits.

'Why the hell does it look like this will someone please bloody clean it!' he yells

To which I yell harder and louder 'I also work you prick, I haven't got time. If it bothers you so much then get a maid!'

Obviously we can't afford a maid and obviously it was me that ended up having to clean the damn mess, right!

And I think I speak for every single working woman that is married with kids when I say that we do pick up most of the slack! I'm not trying to be resentful or bitchy. It's just a damn fact!

I have heard from women in these groups where we see there's a huge theme of:

Husbands that never cook - The percentages look about: 82% women still doing the complete share of the cooking. 24% say their husbands help and only 12% of husbands do the majority share in the kitchen

Husbands that don't even know how to turn on a laundry load

Husbands that come home from work at the same time as the wives and then go relax, play video games, watch a show or something similar cos they've done their full day of work, meanwhile....

So has the wifey, yet she now juggles the kids, dinner, next day lunches, laundry, homework, bath times, bed times etc all on her own

The sad part is that when they ask their husbands to help, they're met with snide remarks, reminders about how busy or stressed they are or down right narc comments about how it's not their job.

If you think I'm kidding, please go join the facebook group 'BRIDGING THE GAP' where similar data, THIS ONE FOR EXAMPLE and equal stuff from our focus groups are published in conversation format and are widely available for all to see. It's heartbreaking!

I base what I have said above very vaguely off the results that have come from our FOCUS GROUPS where the overwhelming about of stories from women (I can't share raw findings all due to GDPR) but the voices are screaming that they are sick of being the one that covers all ground while their partners, not only refuse but literally state they don't have to and it is HER job.

I've also had a number of women say that in response to this, they have threatened to quit their jobs then and become stay at home women.

If it is HER job then she will take to it full time but she sadly won't get paid.

Oh but then the tone changes. 'But we can't afford for you to not work your paid job'

So, double standards = double duty for the ladies. What you gonna do?

If the husband/ man wants to get all traditional and keep his woman at home he must earn enough to provide for that, no?

And if he says 'no, sorry off to work you go', then surely her other full time unpaid modern job should see him also get a little modern, no?

See what I'm saying?

It's no surprise now that the younger generations have started stating they have no wish to get married or start families. With broken, toxic setups like this it's not a great marketing campaign to our younger ones. When all they see are massive gaps, abusive parents, divide and hate, why would the idea of love and marriage sound like a good idea at all?

IS ALL HOPE LOST?

Honestly, some of the stories in the live groups have had us all in tears.

I love men and I truly believe that there are great men out there but my goodness, we've a way to go before they rise and show themselves. We're still in the trauma basement living through a systemic lie where most men are either weak and oblivious or are completely aware and downright narcissistic. They know it and they love it!

Statistically, we see that in broken homes, children usually end up with the mother for the most part and now, legally, men are only obliged to pay a minimal percentage of salary towards the upkeep of their kids.

This hasn't really increased over the years of rising cost of living so it's another thing the woman has to bare the brunt of. I know many that do and the system does very little to support single mothers, which then means it favours the man. Women and children really still the lower brackets :(sad to say

We sadly still live in a world where men are favoured and women and children come last.

I recently did a research article about 'WORKHOUSES AND ASYLUMS' for a Victorian history project. I will be clear. Men didn't join the workhouse. They were outside making their way but women and children, especially the illegitimates, yes they went to the workhouse. The last ones only closed down in the 1940s post 2nd world war. Less than 100 years ago. We still carry this!

It was very well known that noone ever wanted to go to the workhouse. The conditions were abysmal. There are still people attempting to traces back family members through these places as they were so common place during the wars and broken families then were the norm.

It seemed men were far more favoured, especially the ones that could enter the army because they got education, medical, housing and everything for free. Women and children? Think again

And now, we see especially in the medical fields the difference of treatment between men and women. I had a friend who finally managed to convince her husband to get a vasectomy.

'Why should it always be the woman to commit to contraception? It's far less invasive for a man to get a procedure than it is for a woman plus on a man it's reversible', she told him....

So off he went to get it done. A 10 minute procedure where they actually gave him a general anaesthetic and NO JOKES, a lolly pop and sticker!

I can't be sure whether that was done as a joke or not, but WOW! Meanwhile, his wife had spent years having coils inserted into her womb with ZERO pain control. It wasn't even an option. Nothing offered EVER! This after having 2 children drug free as they'd left it too long for pain relief to be an effective option

I have other female friends that have gone in for biopsies and smears and they were only offered numbing gel. Coming out crying, they couldn't believe the cruelty from within the medical complex that pain solutions for a woman are never a thing but for a man....They offer everything on a cloud!

WHY IS THIS?

Why are men encouraged to be treated like babies yet women are encouraged to be act like men? Why the very distinct and clear role manipulations that we so stupidly feed into?

It really kills the romance hey!

It really fucks with the natural rhythm. But for who's benefit cos it's sure as hell not ours? Who's behind all this meddling and frankensteining?

The false Gods? The real Gods? Is there a difference? The bank? The church? The government? US?

And just to finish off, given we're covering both sexes and the wars inflicted upon us, let's not forget our blessed sisters over in the Middle East where since ?? The timeline seems strange on this one, but they have all been 'forced' to wear hijabs.

Now, I don't have an issue if a woman wants to wear a hijab and it is HER CHOICE to wear one, but if it is forced upon her by a man due to societal conforms then yes, I have a problem with that.

I live close to many Middle Eastern countries and have many friends from some of them. Here, we have a large Syrian community and the women and girls are able to walk freely around here no problem but I have heard many state that back in their home nations that would be forbidden.

One of the girls I work with is from Iran and said her parents chose to move here so she could have more freedom in her life but she is from a beautiful part of Iran with incredible national dress should she choose, however only in the last couple of years has that started to come back in. Prior to then it was very oppressive.

Then my aunty posted on facebook all the many REAL traditional dresses from Eastern countries, and they are ALL exquisite! Perfectly respectable, incredibly feminine, utterly divine garments and many aren't allowed to wear them anymore and must dress from head to toe in black only able to show their eyes?

Then yesterday in the news, we saw the girl in Iran that dared to go outside in her underwear to fight for women's liberties, rights and freedoms. I pray for her safety, I really do. Someone should keep an eye on her. But when did this blatant degrading of women become such a thing?

It was only in 1979 that the Islamic revolution took force (BBC article attached if interested). Prior to then, these national dresses were donned and women were, from what I gather, respected and loved.

AND NOW? WHAT CHANGED AND WHY?

Now, there is an attempt to normalise this everywhere!

ENOUGH! STOP! THIS IS WAR!

So I guess we've got to ask then, why the hell are we still rushing out to couple up? What are we doing? Is it because deep down we still really hold hope for good, old fashioned true love and romance? What even is that? Or is it a social program? MAN + WOMAN = THE RIGHT THING TO DO? And then a few years down the line, man or woman sits there and ponders 'what was I thinking? Why have I done this?'

But we rushed in. We did it for all the wrong reasons. We wanted the nice house. The fancy life. We put it all online to impress others and make it seem like it's all glorious - Meanwhile, your husbands doing the neighbour, you absolutely can't stand him and you know you can't leave because he's got it all tied into legal papers to threaten you in case you do.

We sold ourselves out for a fake life to impress others. As long as your instafeed gets the hits, hey! FRIEND NO! The message was not to have followers but rather disciples. Be the leader your wife needs. Be the temple your husband needs. Together be the kingdom that your children need and make that kingdom eternal! Don't worry about the rest. It won't matter

THIS IS THE GREAT WAR

THE GREAT LOVE

For so long now, I have witnessed this thing. A thing that is breaking, falling apart, splitting at the sides and burning from acidic corporate influence.

Where has the love gone?

I wrote a post on my blog not long ago about the importance of looking back over the ages and passages of time where we can see from other places and spaces the magic that the timeline held and the essence it chooses to share with us via books, movies, music and art.

This is one of the reasons I love theology and philosophy so much and am a bonafide time traveller as the lessons and messages that are important to our human experience, discovery and development are all visibly connected through historic threads and weaves that tie all of our timelines together and each time we access one and pull on the thread to relive the spirit of that moment or bring alive a character or memory, we are allowing a connection, a spark, something special to exist that can hopefully make the world we live in a more meaningful place.

I watch old black and white movies where they really go in for the kiss. The kind of kiss they hold as if they're breathing each other in. There's no way you can find that kind of sensational love anymore in movies. We've crassed out love. Cheapened it. Taught girls to hate men and boys to hate women so now they're all kinds of confused.

We've instead created rap music where men walk around with their pants by their knees swinging their arms around like they're either animals or hiding weapons up their sleeves or maybe both. Probably both. Young boys these days do tiktoks about how they want a girl to suck it and think they're big in front of their mates and young girls are walking around miming terribly to songs about porn stars with barely a dress on and their butt cheeks poking out the bottom. 'Yeah but they're so cute tho' - 'Would the real I WANT TRUE LOVE please stand up!'

STANDS UP!

I was working in a school and one of the pastoral care team came to tell us that one of the girls in senior school was having issues holding her pee because her boyfriend had been watching a certain type of porn where he thought that it was actually normal to fist a girl. He believed this was normal. Everyone else is doing it, no? And she didn't dare to say no because she didn't want him to think she wasn't into it and she wondered, 'well, everyone else is doing it so this must be normal no?' Erm, NO! She was 15 and now has a perforated bladder and the trauma that she considered that a normal functioning boy girl sexual startup. NO!

We have stopped seeking real love, pure love, safe love because safety isn't something that feels safe anymore. The darkness often holds more safety, we always run to our comfortable hell. Safe is boring. It's not cool. Unless it's shocking wtf is the point?

"Let me entertain you" says the joker in the clown mask. Clown world is real. We love it! It thrills us - The rest can suck it

THE MESSENGER

As a student of theology, philosophy and psychology for most of my life, (thrown in some linguistics too for good measure) I have spent my life trying to decipher TRUTH from every corner, angle, depiction, book and God known to mankind. Haha mankind has its limits right?

I have studied the occult, mysticism, the bible old and new, ancient texts of the sumerians, enoch, witchcraft, astrology, astronomy, magick, aliens, conspiracy, prophecy and the full 360 from all of these.

As I have stated, the pantheon of Gods is no different to the players in the bible but the messages from all work both in favour and against the message of the most high. (That's you by the way) It is up to you to decide how you are going to level up your world.

I am using them, from Aphrodite, Juliet, Mary Magdalene as tools and insights into the many ways we can love and feel and what those connections can show us.

Here in Cyprus, the Island where Aphrodite was born and since arriving here 4 years ago, my whole world looks a whole lot different that it did when we lived in England and everything made sense - In some ways I am far more connected. In others I feel like I died and am still unsure of the version I am of myself now because I'm still settling in

It would seem that the Aphrodite effect really is a thing. Everywhere here is named after Aphrodite and Adonis or Venus in places and her reign has a stronghold over the activity on this Island whether that be via the effects of the Hermaphrodite aka a combination of Hermes and Aphrodite (the 2 were also lovers with Hermes a known bi-sexual and playboy) or via the Aphrodisiac effects strengthening bonds and unions of divine love. Whichever it be is up to each individual to choose and experience.

Here on this Island, as I am sure is the case most places in the world right now given the way of the world, we have a large group of gay friends and acquaintances that specifically state that against orthodox tradition, they keep their sexual identity secret with some that dared to open up being cast to the mountains and told 'not to come down' as it's shamed their tight network and rattled the yaiya's fundamental beliefs of her structured religious world.

We also have a significant group of young teens and YA's exploring their sexuality and are very openly doing so in ways that coming from England, where I thought it was open there, here on the Island and it's a tiny place let's be serious where everyone knows everyone, the younger generation are making it clear that how they chose to live and under what sexual pretext, they will decide that for themselves, so step aside!

It's an interesting place for me to be stood as I am in the middle of the strict orthodox old world where having read and studied biblical text for a lot of my life I understand the doctrine of the church and see its strong patriarchal dominance over society and then I see the new world, where there is a rising against the strict doctrine of the sexes where each to their own follows suit in pursuit of self identity and discovery away from the secular ties of the church that have bound us all down to such brutal earthly principles for so so long now

I love to be the observer. I try to never judge, criticise or pull either side in to spew about how I think it should go. The brilliance of the way the world is is that we all get to choose our fate by deciding what works for us so if that for you is church, GREAT!

If otherwise it is the pantheon with some hints of Astrology, GREAT!
Because if there is one thing I can say on the subject, it is that 'BELIEF' is in itself a mask. A faux identity we one day attach to, only to discard it the next in favour of another and given that all of the above are tied in together (Christ was Khrishna, Aphrodite was Ishtar, Yahweh was Jupiter was highlander aka Christoper Lambert, Lilith was the hand of Inanna that was Eve was Pandora ya da ya da ya da)

On a side note and one that Aphrodite stood for as its biggest cheerleader, Innana was forced by the hand of the approaching new solar Gods to force Lilith to yield her secret symbol the snake. Let's just spend a moment also having a little peep at Lilith as she is one that is worth a mention if we're going to tie the bible and all other pan theo greco-roman pagan Gods together and how from the start of creation, the main male female protagonists help us to bring love into life and teach us how NOT to act and behave if we want this love to last

LILITH

Lilith's lore, it is popularly said, originates from ancient Jewish traditions. The most famous story about Lilith is the Hebrew one which is not in the Bible, but in some Jewish writings and the Kabbalah.

There Lilith was the first wife of Adam. There are different versions of the story. Some say that she actually was the snake who gave the apple to Eve.

Some say that she went to live on the shores of the Red Sea which actually consists of her menstrual blood (A bitter story of post persecuted rage and vengeance) and then another story possibly drummed up by the patriarch itself to sway the voters suggest that she became a kind of demon who ate her own children or appeared in the dreams of Adam to "steal" his sperm.

Now, I don't buy into that and I'll tell you why. While Aphrodite was a lover of balance between the sexes and bringing pleasure to BOTH men and women, Lilith was 'the' female origin. She was our starter seed. Our mother, our leader and like the tale tells, she was possibly the very snake indeed that gave Eve the apple.

The story of the garden of Eden is a controversial one (A really deep breakdown of it can be found here in 2 SNAKES AND A GARDEN though be aware it is LONG) and when we consider the origins of Yahweh, old testament ruler and the connections to Jupier / Zeus and his kingdom aka the one we are currently in ruled by the heavy handed patriarch, then it makes sense that the powerful female players were forced to submit and yield their powers to the authorities and so the playbook was created, the rulers of this kingdom that we are living in right now are still going strong (not for long) and they have cast out all the female power players and for good reason for their kingdoms could not have prevailed if there were disobedient women their to threaten their flex .

Powers it must be said to be far stronger than that of the power of men. And the Gods very well knew that! For this woman, who created her home at the base of the tree in the garden of Eden was the power that united heaven and earth.

Lilith with Eve below

When she fled and Adam was left without a companion (entitled creature he was indeed) the Gods fashioned him one out of a rib as earth had already been made out of clay, and along came Eve.

So yes, the snake delivering the apple to Eve was very likely her first in command or trusty ally Lilith helping her to take back the power and connect the realms.

So towards the end of the Sumerian reign, we saw that Lilith was the first woman before Eve and is said to have been Adam's initial partner made from the same Earth as him.

Unlike the story of Adam and Eve where Adam was first created and then Eve was born from him, the notion that both Lilith and Adam were both born equals of the same mater saw Lilith expecting to be treated as an equal and unwilling to submit to Adams dominant intent, she decided to leave the garden and defeated by the patriarch, she made her way to the red sea, as above, filled with her grieving blood and an eternal message that while she was gone, she would not be forgotten.

Now, after all of what I have written, not just about Lilith but any of the Goddess protagonists or characters, please can I just note at this stage before any hardcore Christian comes at me and says as they have done on social 'THAT IS SO WRONG - HOW YOU'VE PORTRAYED LILITH IS A LIE' - Yes, there is always 'another side - Another view' as I stated in the intro of Lilith, there are many that consider her a sperm stealer / child eater.

I acknowledge these other versions and encourage everyone to seek their own truths but please know, I am not by any means suggesting that any of these tales are indefinite truth. We are allowed to view and consider our perspective history from a 360 lens.

We cannot ever know what is fiction and what is fact. None of us have ever met God, Jesus or Zeus yet we speak of them assuming their power and glory or otherwise disregard them but they are phantomtastic players that's stories give us insight and enlightenment into how we can better our own lives. How we can reach for the stars and beyond and fill our hearts with love.

I could say the same for Aphrodite. Girl could have been an absolute hoe bag he/she with a list as long as Kim Kardashians Christmas list of lovers but on the other side of the lessons of love she shows us or rather allows us to feel, is that there really could be a knight in shining armour out there, a prince thats kiss can awaken us, a king that has a throne and pretty sparkled out crown for you to rock!

Sometimes theories are nothing more than poetic potentials. Stop always looking for cold hard fact and just allow the poetry to move through you.

“I’ll tell you a secret: We don’t read and write poetry because it’s pretty. We read and write poetry because we belong to the human race, and the human race is filled with passion. Medicine, Law, Commerce, Engineering. They are all noble and necessary races to dignify human life. But poetry; beauty, romance, love, these are the things that keep us alive” - Robin Williams, Dead Poets Society (1989)

OH THE GODS

After all of what I have mentioned here with regards to the many Gods or the only God source creator of all, the various paths and the multitude of poems. The many ways by which we can argue the truth about life and it's grand meaning, pantheon or singular, we always fight over the right way and everyones too scared to go the wrong way, I wish to point out at this point that this is the entire point of the human experience

We go between polarities and parties so that we can explore their intrinsic values and find from them what meaning and worth we can hold on to. There are many that will fool you into thinking you have to pick a side or a team. You can't worship 2 Gods aka the Devil or Jesus, but were they not both Sons of the one God? So don't worship either but follow rather the path of the one that's kingdom you seek.

They are not always right or wrong for there is truth and untruth in all of what we're told and I have come to find that the truth is in finding light and meaning in ALL of it as it is ALL from God but to not attach to belief so much and let God lead you to where you are meant to go.

Let go and Let God

IT IS SAID THAT THE HARDEST ROCK BECOMES
SOFT OVER TIME WHEN THE FLOW OF WATER
OVER IT PERSISTS

THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES

Why do these gender roles set us apart? Is it so there has to be a side and one side will always ultimately win? We see it play out in politics, finance, economics, religion, education, sport, war, so why not of course love and sex - It ALL ties in together! Pick a side! Choose a team! Noone wants to be on the losing team however so make sure you chose wisely

However, in the divine higher order, there is no such picking of sides or ruling order. There is no trinity. There is no elite. There is no competition. There is a man and there is a woman and there are 2 become 1.

FYI I do apply this thought also to women that are perhaps more naturally masculine or men that are perhaps more naturally feminine because they are just energies we all have within us. The 12 year old boy I mentor at school even said to me a few weeks ago

'You do know that within each of us exists a man and a woman for we are both?'

I said 'Wow Alf, yeah I had noticed this.' And we started to try make sense of it a little further and again, it kind of comes down to our multidimensional selves.

Conversations like 'if there are different parallel versions of us and we are aiming at unifying them all, we need to pull the threads of all the parts back into the centre.'

Or 'that if we already exist within the centre, a spinning ball if you will, perhaps when the ball turns 180, we become the other part of us' ...like day and night ...'That perhaps our own TWIN FLAME is in actual fact our 'other half self'. The part of us that makes us whole. The male version of me or the female version of you. Maybe that's why so many are exploring the gender fluid concept because committing to your birth assigned gender no longer holds the value society tells us it should.

My husband and I have 2 daughters. Our eldest is now 15 and our youngest is 10. He's watched them grow up and has often come to me in utter confusion. Mystified he'll say to me

'Why are they beating the shit out of each other? I thought little girls brushed each other's hair and tied it up with ribbons. Why can't they just do that?'

And I laugh because I once put a bowl on my little sister's head when at 11 I chopped off all her hair. She wanted to be a boy so I turned her into one. Every restaurant we went to would send her to the gents toilets. She spent the next 5 years until her boobs fully grew actually identified as a boy and she loved it! Now, at 43 she's the girliest girl but you know, ebbs and flows.

FLUID

But that picture that single lane society sold us of how girls should play and how boys should play is far from the reality ...dying! Haha, my eldest's bedroom looks like an industrial engineering lab. There are hub caps suspended from the curtain rails, soldering irons plugged into where hair straighteners should go. Wire strippers and cable ties everywhere. Glue guns!

And her male friends are either as gay as the day is long or are the delightful kind to come and make sure she's unplugged all her equipment for safety purposes.

They're all blissfully different and is that not ok?

F*CK MISOGYNY, SEXIST AGENDAS AND LET PEOPLE JUST BE!

For we all spin 360 left, right, up down, across and side to side. Connecting the magnetic dots to create an equilibrium. Sometimes you've got to go through the crazy to get there....But we get there!

BUT WHEN WE COMMIT TO ANOTHER IN LOVE...

It speaks clearly of this in the bible and most other spiritual scripture and for those that have a good sense of connected intuition, they know deep inside themselves that when they chose a partner and decide to commit to that partner, that for better or for worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer, until death parts you, you are committed to one another in a loving bounded union where for goodness sake, you do all you can to rise above temptations, deliver yourselves from evil, for yours is the kingdom with power and glory, forever and ever AMEN!

You could be reading this and think 'Wow, she sounds like one of those church radicals preaching and promoting arranged marriages and outlawing divorce and abortion' - Absolutely not, I don't think anything in the future will require a law as such anyway, at least not for those that seek union from a baseline of value, commitment and sincerity.

This is something that will come naturally I'm sure for those with clear hearts make clear decisions for their future.

Am I saying it will therefore be easy? NO BLOODY WAY! With the way the world works right now and all the agendas in place to pull you apart and destroy you there is no way on earth that this will be easy.

BEFORE YOU SAY ANY VOW TO ONE ANOTHER YOU FIRST NEED TO ASK:

- Why am I entering into a commitment with this person?
- How well do I know this person I am committing myself to?
- Do I trust this person enough to spend a lifetime with?
- Does this person share my values?
- Is this person's family someone I can blend my family with?

And even after ticking all the boxes on all of these primary qualifying questions, it still won't be an easy ride so that is why you have to be CLEAR about what it is you're doing and why

⊖ Don't marry someone that you met in a club because they are a hot cubicle lover that gets you free shots all night and maybe buys you a bag of chips from the food van for afters

⊖ Don't marry the bad boy that tells you all the right things but gives you the feeling that perhaps he's telling those things to a fair few others also and although you're not sure, although you feel uneasy he's devilishly good looking and apparently that counts more than trust

⊖ Don't marry the girl that would ditch you for the guy that's got a few more 00's on the end of a pay cheque or is in search of the glitters and gold over the real effort and heart of gold. 00's go up. 00's go down
#flow

✔ DO marry the person that shows up for you in your darkest, weakest, most vulnerable state and promises that against all odds and despite all conflicts they will be there for you as a solid, stable and reliable companion

✔ DO marry the person that understands that regardless to who brings in £ or £££ the pot is one and it is distributed evenly so that everyone in the family benefits as equals. That it is not a competition of she V he where bread winning takes president over there being enough in the cup to support a family where everyone is considered counterpart and parallel regardless of status or salary income

✔ DO marry the person that understands the importance of family values and appreciates them being honoured so that children can be raised with love, purpose and bonded affection where both sides encourage strong connections to other family members, grandparents, cousins, aunts and uncles so that the family bond may be widened and never divided

✔ DO marry the person that understands you will age and that the beauty of your loving bond and unbreakable commitment to each other is stronger than any Victorias Secret models seemingly crucial assets and that comparisons as such stand no place in your blessed home

✔ DO marry the person that makes you feel safe so that even if the ground under you breaks or houses are lost, money disappears and life hits the rocks, find the person you feel safe with to rebuild so that you can help each other out of the fire and water

A friend of mine sent me some feedback that had been discussed at a bridal shower not so long ago so, I would like to share it below for all those that are entering into a marriage commitment or union with another, some blessed words for you to consider before you take your vows (Baring in mind this was a bridal shower it was written on behalf of the woman to her man):

- Develop a friendship with your husband. Work on cultivating this throughout your life, laughing together and truly knowing one another
- Sometimes all you can do is pray for your husband and be patient. Let God work in him things that you simply cannot
- Forgive often. Do not harbour resentment. Try to be the first to go to the other to ask for forgiveness
- Work on your communication and express how you feel and why. It may take many years to get there but you need to get there together and not be talking past, above or below each other
- Even if you are still in an argument, give each other a kiss or a hug goodnight with the understanding that there will be resolve in a new day
- Try to say yes to the other person as often as you can. Try not to put boundaries on them being who they are the way they are because when they are their best, authentic self the relationship will be better too
- Don't compare your marriage to anyone else's. You only ever see what others want you to see so understand that surface level impressions are often not as they seem deeper down. Work only on your marriage towards the goals you both set as your own hopes and dreams. Do not be influenced by others
- Don't imagine your spouse as someone else and expect them to compete with that. Your spouse cannot compete with your imagination
- Be careful what you read in the secular world regarding marriage. Most of it will be used as a way to pull you apart from your spouse and focus on the singular, selfish aspects of life where you as an individual counts more than two individuals becoming one. Yes, you are an individual but in a marriage union you are 2 people with 1 goal. You will only reach it if you work together as one

After all this said, if you think this is too much, too hard, perhaps after all they're not the right person and you just aren't sure, WAIT!

Fools rush in - And yes, some fools down the line meet the reckoning and have their moment of triumphant glory where trumpets sound and all rejoice that after all the odds they made it but, they are few and far between.

If you are not sure about a lifetime commitment then please just WAIT!

You can still try the 'let's move in together' because an apartment contract is easy to get out of if all fails. You can still date, play the long game, go the slow way round if you aren't sure. You can do the whole 'It's me and me alone' game if partnerships really aren't your thing and be the 70 yr old lady with 14 cats if you prefer but if you're going to get married- BE SURE YOU KNOW WHY before you do

THE FAKE CONTRACT V THE DIVINE CONTRACT

This is super triggering, yet I feel I have to bring this up because it goes back to the whole 'If all else fails at least there's the divorce card' contingency.

Again, you're bargaining a blessed union on monetary gains, split assets, protecting your wealth from each other instead of for each other all under the illusive separation act passed through a 'court of law' which is the same 'court of law' that issues you with the entitlement to marry in the first place

This is a huge issue. All systems are tied together to empower over and above you and your very own union where if all goes wrong, the only benefactor is the enabler within the system itself. It looks to protect you from each other but in actual fact it destroys.

The church and the government departments both work together to 'under their doctrine' bind you together in a family union as husband and wife. You become a united asset of their establishment. You declare yourselves to them via your ceremonial commitment and they issue you with certificates to declare you confirmed matrimonial partners under the eyes of the church and law.

But let me be clear - The Church is nothing more than an official bureaucratic stamp department for the overriding government that has many other departments that foresee every single aspect of our lives.

There is no God here, at least not the one you make your divine union with. The God that blesses your union has nothing to do with man made contracts or the dissolution or partition of any such commitment made between YOU AND YOUR SPOUSE.

Isn't it funny that the patriarchy is the one that sets the rules, laws and orders by which we must abide but when we marry, we enter into a matrimony, a matriarchal agreement yet overseen by the patriarchal system?

What place does the patriarch have in the order of the matriarch? Could it then be that under the laws set upon us by man made council and not divine council that our marriages are all fake, null and void? The same as most of the 'so called' legally binding legislations set upon us that have nothing to do with the commandments given to us by God

That in order to have a TRUE MARRIAGE the only thing required is the blessing of GOD at the time of the vows and promises.

Please bear this in mind when you stand there and say your vows that while sure, you are entering into a governmental contract (and what on earth has the government got to do at all with your bloody marriage?)

You are also being silently and secretly witnessed by the ONLY power needed to bless and sanctify your marriage so please know this. Think about this. Take strength in this.

That at that moment where you both say I do, look into each other's eyes and know you are saying it in front of the only power that matters and that is all you need to bless your marriage and keep you in faithful union

NO CERTIFICATE NECESSARY! GOD ALREADY ANOINTED YOU

The difference between a courthouse wedding and a God wedding are exactly this.

You could be 2 people like Romeo and Juliet that wish to bond their love with one witness and a conductor acting on behalf of the high God to confirm their Godly love as husband and wife and that is all.....Truly, that is all!

THE FAKE MARRIAGE

BRIDEZILLA, WHERE FOR ART THOU?

OK, so my husband has had the great displeasure of working directly with a wedding company here on love Island where he has been manning a team of people setting up the venues, organising the what whats and this is so far out of his usual domain where he has worked in Veterinary for a decade where he fell into this unbeknownst to him as to why a couple of years ago. He's done a few summers now project managing the set ups and arrangements and he comes home green from what he witnesses

The amount of unnecessary money spent on waste products that simply go in the bin after all so that the aesthetic gets met above and beyond anything and everything else.

The only important thing these days is what a wedding is going to look like to everyone else according to some bridezilla that days prior to the wedding will march around the grounds like some venomous draco dictator with a machine gun yelling orders at her minions so that 'her day' can be exactly as she expects it to be for the pleasure of her guests - Not her and her husband's but her guests. All a show

GIRL CHILL

Don't ruin your day by putting unnecessary false illusions and expectations on yourself. It is YOUR day not everyone else's. Trust that your day will be exactly as it is meant to be and watch how incredible it turns out to be!

You don't need to micromanage the staff or give side eye to those aiming to make your day magical. Remember, in sleeping beauty, the fairy godmothers and their magic wands? If you put your trust and faith in everyone making your day as magical as you hope it will be and show gratitude for the hard work everyone is providing to make your day so epic, guess what? IT WILL BE!

You don't need to stress yourself out that anyone attending your wedding will judge you or criticise you for however you have decided to design your day because IT IS YOUR DAY and it is NOT their place to judge so don't let the thought of that enter your mind

You don't need to stress about your photographs or memory keepsakes - There will be a hundred cameras there on the day and the best photograph will be the one of you looking relaxed and satisfied, not stressed and overwhelmed.

YOU are creating your happily ever after so all you need to do is show up as if you're the princess that's just been kissed by a handsome dude on a horse and the rest will follow.....

THE PATRIARCHY CREATED BRIDEZILLA TO ANNIHILATE THE SACRED COUPLE FROM DAY 1. THE HATRED OF THE UNION IS STRONG. THE FORCES THAT BE TRULY DO NOT WANT YOU TO BE DIVINELY UNITED WHICH IS WHY THEY NEVER LET THE TRUE MATRIARCH AND DIVINE FEMININE INTO HER SACRED SPACE. THEY DON'T WANT UNIONS. THEY WANT CONTRACTORS. THEY HATE WOMEN. THEY DON'T WANT YOU IN THIS SPACE, THEY WANT YOU WORKING LIKE A MAN OUT OF YOUR HOME AND AWAY FROM YOUR CHILDREN. THIS IS ANTI-GOD. IT IS NOT WHAT WE'RE HERE FOR

The wedding market has turned into such a capitalist money making conglomerate taking away any actual meaning of a wedding and turning it into a war zone of mentally ill brides constantly needing to up-do and over extend and spend to make their event the event of the season.

I'll never understand why anyone wants to get married here in July and August (wedding season)- The 2 months of the year you will never catch me wearing makeup as it simply slides off in seconds due to 100% humidity and sea salt sweat so you can only imagine the levels of crazy that go with 'making sure the bride doesn't lose her cool'

Walk in ice closets and freezers, air con units at every single table corner, fans absolutely everywhere and people following her with said fans, the bride doesn't leave her suitably chilled quarters until the very last minute to prevent any smudging, smearing or sweating.

Perfection has its cost - What of the grooms though? Noone knows. Noone cares to ask. It's not bloody about them really, is it!

Let me be clear. If this is how you start your marriage, it likely will not go far. If this is the intention you set upon initiating your MARRIAGE at the very moment you are platforming your ceremony to the world upon such a toxic stage for all to see dressed up like some feather glittered pompom for an X factor TOWIE spectacle debacle you've kind of already flopped it. You've entirely missed the point

Brides seem to want a day - Ladies, this is a marriage commitment. It starts the day you get wed. Please treat your wedding with the divine respect it deserves and do not cheapen it to some overly expensive circus performance for instagram because that is absolutely not the point. If what you're looking for is an honoured commitment, treat it so from the get go

Your wedding is the day that confirms your vows and sanctifies your commitment. Let that be the ruling purpose, not the floral display arches or oversized centre pieces.

Sure, you can celebrate, you should! If you wish to have an enormous party or festivity to celebrate absolutely go ahead but on the day of your wedding, take seriously your reasons for being there - Party after however you decide if you decide. Also know, you really don't have to

All the decadence in the world won't make your marriage any more set to succeed or put it above and beyond anyone else's. Anyone can throw a party to celebrate anything. Only the 2 of you can celebrate your marriage (and the intimacies of whoever gives you away or bares witness to the magic)It's not for anyone else to be involved in, not the government, not your friends or extended family members half of which you moan about having to invite anyway, it's not for ANYONE but the 2 of you!

If you seem to think otherwise.....

I again ask, where is the love?

I met with some girlfriends a while back and we spoke about the series 'Married at first sight' - This isn't something I would ever think to watch as reality stuff isn't really my thing but, as a psychologist and someone that understands (not necessarily follows) astrology profiling, compatibility and the Gods and stars and all things studded and aligned, I decided to give it a bash!

WOW! So, turns out people actually have a list of what they expect out of a partner

- Specific height and weight goals
- Colour of hair and eyes
- Specific style and aesthetic taste
- Must be - into sport, not into sport, into books, not into reading, a good cook, likes to dine out every night etc
- Profession - title, workplace, salary, time in employment
- Religious interests
- Must have nice car, wear good perfume / cologne, good taste in jewellery, nice house with functional and spacious accessory areas
- Must like holidays away at such destination and have access to travel and funds
- Must have parents that are X, siblings that are Y, no kids, friends that are Z and a background check that is.....

Listen, to some degree we all do this. It is known as a 'type' - A connection. A common ground that makes sense because it is familiar and relatable.

A person tends to be interested in a person that makes sense to them because it's more than likely to work if you're already on the same page but, making sure you have your compliance list checked, stamped and apostilled via the authorities takes away any room for divine intervention, an act of God, a whisper from spirit, a connection from the most high.

Soul mates, twin flames cannot be found by interviewing potential candidates for the role. This is not a business agreement or contractual arrangement from a corporate structure. This is blind, fated love.

The one to bear witness to your life and if you wish for it to be filled with genuine, pure and overflowing love as richly and deeply as possible then you best put down the spreadsheet and the clipboard and instead open your heart, mind, soul and look deeper!

GO DEEPER! You won't find anything deep on the surface level where all the shit so easily rises to the top

You know when you boil a broth and all the fat bubbles reach the surface and if you want a golden, translucent liquid you've got to skim off all the guzz that foams together looking pretty gnarly and grim, yeah, that's got to go! And remember, a good broth takes hours to make.

It's a long game recipe but it's one that the mexicans always said 'A good broth can revive the dead' and dead you will be in spirit and in love unless you are prepared to put in the time, effort and consistency and deep dive to find the one true soul mate or match mate for you to go the distance with!

It is funny how in this age of the rising feminine, we are being called to speak out and rise up so that we can pull our boys out of the pits and show them how to be men.

Adam, stuck to the bottom of the pit having a tantrum because Lilith wanted to go on top and he didn't wanna so she got sick and tired of his toxic masculine dominant bullshit with his petty, entitled attitude so she quit the garden only to get replaced by Eve who was just too damn curious for Adam that again, he got pissed off with this second woman second time around cos she just wouldn't do as she was told.

But all this shows us is that Men haven't got a damn clue about what the hell they're trying to establish anyway and that they're simply going around in circles flexing muscle to drive profit off war and keep their faux power and control agenda going using all the tools they know how to use for.

It's a very boring, repetitive, kindergarten act that they can't elevate from or make any more exciting because they lack the imagination or real know how because the ones with the real imagination and know how got booted out the playground and told she was no good.

BREATHE

This is because we're dealing with boys, not men! Real men honour their women. They know their woman is equal in their own rights. If their woman wants to go on top they aren't going to throw their toys out of the cot.

They want her to stand true in her power and while there she is in her full glory he will protect her and keep her safe and when he does that, she knows she can trust him and in that security, she feels like she can be soft, creative and able to float like a weightless feather but also strong and dynamic enough to rule her kingdom and guard her nest as the bird that she is, as the snake that she is, as the angel that she is as the mother that she is as the lover that she is.

Every single archetype she is can be embodied in that divine because she has been allowed to be so by her MAN, not a boy.

And men don't play around. They don't have eyes for others. They can see a beauty for a beauty and that is fine but they don't need to chase it and pin it down because they already have their own. They don't have secret accounts behind your back because they don't do anything behind your back.

Jamie Fraser, Outlanders Scottish sacred masculine absolute heartthrob knows! Oh yes, he knows.

I can't recall the episode, I just swallowed them all up but I clearly recall him saying and I quote:

“I have lived through war and lost much
I know what's worth a fight and what is not
Honour and courage are matters of the bone
And what a man would kill for he'd sometimes die for too
A man's life springs from his woman's bones
And in her blood is his honour christened
For the sake of love alone would I walk through fire again”

YES, SIR ♥ THIS IS THE REAL DEAL

On the reverse of this, a weak man, a toxic man, a broken man breaks his woman. He spills her blood, thins it, making her bones brittle. Weakening the frame that holds them both

REAL MEN

They are up front and honest, reliable, ethical, their morals are in check because they know themselves and they stand strong and with an effortless pride in who they are. You'd never have a niggling doubt or a worry. You just wouldn't.

They might have a past, sure, don't we all but it led them to who they are so that they can commit to you.

We can play. The playground is for children. But when you decide to commit, you leave the playground behind and you enter into your kingdom. You take your obligations and duties seriously. You don't consider for a moment that you need a prenup or a get out clause because that is absolutely not why you're committing.

It is not an option. You are dedicating your life to this partnership and like it or not, you will find ways to get through every life stage, crisis, conflict, confrontation, change and combat together with grace, purpose and determination.

NOTHING AND NOONE will stand in the way of your kingdom and your offspring. You will guard and protect each other, help and support each other, dedicate yourselves only to one another, lift and raise each other, fall and soften with each other - In sickness and in health, for richer or for poorer, until death parts you

If you read the above and disagree, PLEASE DON'T GET MARRIED! Just stay in the playground. It's ok!

So whatever you 'believe', that's up to you. You can take bits and pieces of all the stories and have them shape your life however you like. You can and you are allowed to seek TRUTH however that is defined or interpreted by you, DO NOT BE AFRAID and magick in the mystery that surrounds all the legends of all and any theological text.

Don't put yourself in the box of 'I can't look that way because if I do I am straying from what I am told is the truth and looking at sin' or 'I can't go this way otherwise I will fall into sin and will never find my place in heaven' - So much of what has been set up in the way it has has been to suppress, subdue and extinguish our connection to the divine. It is ALL divine because it is all from GOD so seek and explore as you so delight!

The fear that you will 'go the wrong way' or 'seek the wrong path' is to stop you from ever seeking the path at all and just get you back into the workhouse so that you will grind quietly and thoughtlessly for the master.

YOU ARE DIVINE and this is why LOVE is the most crucial seed, tool and piece of the puzzle you can possibly acquire and from what I have experienced and witnessed, the message from the Mighty Aphrodite is all but potent and is spilling over for you to fill your cup and enjoy.

A different cup however of the official cup of God but this realm is scattered with agents all willing to share their bounties and powers. And the one I am most connected with (reasons perhaps for that offered below) is the mighty Aphrodite

THE MIGHTY APHRODITE

There is an old Woody Allen movie called 'Mighty Aphrodite' that showcases the influence of our Goddess of love in a comical yet rather provocative way where Woody realises his adopted son is the offspring of a New York prostitute.

They befriend each other yet he doesn't want to tell her that he is raising her child so as a peace offer, he attempts to counsel her out of prostitution and on to the straight and narrow. She however seems quite fond of her 'lady of the street' lifestyle, offering high end detail about her conquests yet in the most innocent and endearing way....

A funny film that highlights that pleasure, connection and sex don't always have to stem from love. A very Aphrodite angle to take on the matter where on the lower frequency of it, you could find someone feeling pleasure by sadomasochistic trauma bonds, ill advised group sex, service for money exchange and other base options whereas on the higher octave, you then experience a more holy, consecrated connection where hopefully both partners are seeking something more substantially sacred.

You often find you reap what you sow, or you seek what is on your level. If not, the magnetic force wouldn't allow for a match. It would be like Juliet trying to forge a relationship with Borat. I doubt that's even a starter.

That said, we all often question why we're in particularly dire situations. Take abuse for example. Why would anyone want to have seeked out a horrific circumstance such as a marriage of physical or mental abuse?

Except on a level that we don't understand from our human brain logic, we actually do.

Call it karma or divine retribution. Our higher selves way of getting us to experience the worst kind of something so that we can learn to transmute the terror of it and rise up from the pits of the darkness.

I wrote about it in my book 'GUIDING LIGHT' and 'Lights, camera, action' where there's a lot of philosophising about our realm, simulation universe and our eyes and when we look at the gospel verse Matthew 6:22:

'The light of the body is thine eye. If therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light' -

Now my interpretation of this is that the left and right (how we are constantly played across these fields in everything from school subjects, sports teams, politics, religious faiths, genders, sexes, red pill, blue pill yadayada) but the ultimate mission is to put the 2 together to form.....ONE!

Put thy hands together in prayer. Put your heart and mind together in body. Put your thoughts together with your feelings and what do you have?

ONE - WHOLE - LIGHT BEING = YOU!

So therefore, in transmuting these pains and pleasures, we have to ask:

DOES GOOD PRODUCE EVIL? DOES EVIL PRODUCE GOOD?

It seems we can't have one without the other - Or perhaps one lends an incentive or a motivation for the other?

So this life of pain, pleasure, fornication and fuckery often gets such a judgement from those that deem to sit on their high throne looking down at the peasants beneath but, have it be known that some of the highest vibrational people work in the sex industry.

Some of the most incredibly attuned people I've ever met (mainly women) have had the ability to use sex as an energetic transmutational tool to change the way that situations play out, allowing themselves into scenarios as bait and performing some of the most alchemical magic through the act of sex in order to shift the pendulum.

DON'T JUDGE ANYONE FOR THEIR SEXUAL ENDEAVOURS - BUT,
UNDERSTAND THAT ENERGY TRANSFER IS REAL SO BE CAREFUL WHO YOU SHARE YOUR JOLLIES WITH!

It will only come back to you!

The movie released this year, 'It ends with us' featuring Blake Lively is a great tale of this. She finds love early with a guy she has a genuine deep connection with, only to find that her abusive father ruins her ability to endure it and later on in life she meets a tall, dark, handsome guy with commitment issues that falls for her in an attempt to heal his womanising ways and settle down.

But later we see that a series of events conclude that he has in fact repeated scenarios of abuse towards her that her own mother endured with her father and ultimately she decides, through higher octave impulse to leave her marriage with her child in order to no longer continue the cycle of torment, freeing herself and her own daughter from the complexities of trauma bonding. 'It ends with them'

She then, in the very last scene, reconnects with the initial partner to find solace and safety with the original flame she truly loved. The trigger perhaps or threat that damaged her ill-fated marriage.

But then what? What does the future look like for them? We never know. We never see. We only ever know it always concludes with a 'happy ever after' - What does this even mean? Because there is no such thing as a perfect relationship. Yes, I speak of divine unions and blessed, sanctified partnerships but is that real or is it all just an illusion?

I sort of think both. I have a feeling that in order to really find true, deep, safe connections, the one thing that we have to do in order to allow them into existence is to know ourselves.

If 2 people truly know themselves deeply, then a relationship is more likely to flow, grow and flourish.

SO HOW DO WE DO THAT? HOW DO WE GET THERE?

Let's look at some of the lessons that the energy of Aphrodite can teach us:

THE MIGHTY, SEXY TEACHER

Aphrodite can teach us many things. She can show you how to find love with yourself through the power of self-cultivated beauty, appreciation and pleasure. Or she can show you how to find 'love' if passion and pleasure is your love language, in bed with a million sailors or, she can show you how to find divine love through the intimate and sacred connection with the ONE you love, devoting yourself only to him or her through romance, sanctity and purity

THE CHOICE IS YOURS - LOVE IS LOVE

I have a memory, I will try to be as brief as possible but the details were WOW. It involved an episode of hurt (sort of one of many from this guy but), my Spanish boyfriend and I were living in York, UK and we decided one summer to book and travel to Italy through France on a bus.

We ended up going through France, (met my stepdad in Bercy Seine where he gave me an apple that randomly came with me from Paris to...) mainland Italy stopping in Milan, then to Genoa and travelling down to catch a ferry over to Sardinia where we spent a week glamping in various agrotourismos. We then went back to Civitavecchia and over to Rome. (The apple came with me all the way until the very last leg of the trip. Don't know why, it just did)

Now, we had planned this on a budget. We were 22 and so we had to be quite particular about our route but once we got to Sardinia, he got a summon from his mother telling him to come straight home to Spain to attend a university interview cutting our holiday short and leaving me alone (I wasn't allowed to join)

The part of this that particularly pissed me off was that scenarios like this, as far as I'm concerned, often require planning so if they knew this was a likely case, why not schedule it in advance instead of needing to immediately cut a holiday short, which was seemingly irrelevant to everyone but me.

The other part that hurt was that I was being abandoned in a country unfamiliar to me with little funds to get me home. The bus route no longer an option, I ended up having to fly back alone so I went from Roma Termini to make my way to the outer city airport literally crying my woes in solitude

But not one to be too hard done by (I am a sagittarius sun so a natural born traveller) I wiped my eyes, put on my finest outfit (I was in Rome after all) and made my way down one of the longest conveyor belts towards my destination.

Half way down this conveyor I noticed that I was oddly completely alone. In a bustling city, this felt strange. And then all of a sudden, coming from the opposite direction was an entire crew of uniformed sailors. Italian sailors in white suits and hats. Hundreds of them. Noticing I was completely alone, my initial feeling was kind of one of panic but as we got closer I noticed there was no need.

Some started to wolf whistle, others were blowing kisses, the sounds were actually hilariously sweet and as we passed directly, the conveyor started to slow down. Time froze and the moment lingered and rather than feel threatened or fearful, these sailors were beautiful. Like angels. They showed me utter appreciation, respect and courtesy. A moment of total romance just for me!

It was like something out of an old movie. I couldn't believe what I was experiencing but my god it filled my heart with joy and made me smile! I turned around to see if anyone else was on the conveyor with me and gradually others were starting to join and the sailors all passed but in that moment where they passed me, I felt beautiful, honoured, raised like a queen!

What a fucking loser was the boy that left me in that City alone but my goodness how many others showed up to put a smile on my face and show me I am worthy! A whole crew of sailors. None of it crass or crude. A moment of appreciation just for me

WE PUT SEX INTO EVERYTHING

Everything these days revolves around sex. I was one young woman passing a hundred sailors. It could have gone wrong but it was nothing but enchanting. Nothing to do with the act of sex needed to come into that moment.

It was like a blessing from the Gods. I guess in that instance Venus, given where I was and Romance, given I was in Rome were the signature feels of that experience. Everyone says that Paris is the city of love. Ugh, I have never had an experience of Paris quite like the experiences (x3) that I have had in Rome.

Rome is the city of love for me but again, it doesn't need to be sexual. It sings a flirtatious ballad, a mysterious old school fantasy where fountains and statues spring essence of renaissance, jewels of wonderment, a bowl of pasta by the Fontana Di Trevi, a new pair of leather shoes from a boutique found in a labyrinth of narrow streets, the nuns passing by, church bells, courtyards and steps and flowers everywhere.

I later moved to Barcelona with said boyfriend and it became my home. My favourite place with its own love stories, mostly sexual, but none that carried the innocent, vintage feels of Rome.

SEX SEX SEX

There is a rise at the moment of certain celebrities proclaiming their committed path of celibacy. Where they have taken a strict cleansing ritual of abstinence forsaking all temptation (alcohol, smokes, drugs, pills, SEX) and have gone deep within themselves to carve pathways to the divine through disciplinary measures that have lifted them higher to the highest. As I mentioned above how the Nephilim WERE NOT THE FALLEN but those who came down from above, the way back to the above is to create a clear path without distraction where one's actions and measures are clean, determined and purposeful.

Lenny Kravitz being one celebrity that proclaims to have practised celibacy now for nine years because he didn't want to be 'that guy' known as the player and away from his spiritual truth.

Suki Waterhouse, young actress declared that prior to meeting Robert Pattinson she took herself 'off the market' (weird weird saying but yeah, in the Old Testament women were said to have been valued amongst equal to cattle so...) and she spend months getting to know herself without the entanglement and energy of others from her past clinging onto her which made her meeting Robert and having that strong initial connection all the more exciting

And others like Hillary Duff, Julianne Hough and Kevin Jonas all put a stress on practising one partner sex before marriage or waiting cos it will be worth it and without being preachy have gone on to state their reasons being that it strengthens the bond and relationship you have with that one person and you're not bringing in a tangled bag full of past mistakes, memories, attachments and sexual trauma bonds into something that you're intending to make last - Why make it difficult? I guess that's the million dollar question right?

Aphrodite may famously be known for her powers of LOVE but that was not all she was gifted for bringing to the table. Let it be known that during her long reign which continues to this day, she was also known as the Goddess of CONSENSUS.

I will get more onto that in a moment but when we consider acts of sex and consenting consensual behaviour, celibacy was also a favoured practice by Aphrodite as with all things that can strengthen a connection whether that be abstinence from sex in order to go deeper within oneself or outwardly expressed towards a loving partner, the deepest way to channel that expression is to create the strongest tide from within.

This helps us look at our energy force, our values, our ethics and our morals. All things that our divine goddess herself stood tall for

We look at Aphrodite / Venus in the charts as the representation of the scales. She is the original Lady Justice / Themis meaning 'order' in Greek where she was goddess of the 'order of the natural world' and in her time she was the final decision maker on the laws of man and nature.

This is also why Aphrodite comes up often in the political world, where Aphrodite worked together with Peitho, the Goddess of Persuasion where they helped the communities in Athens to create unified city structures under the guise of democracy.

Each year in early July, the Athenians celebrate their Gods by way of ritual practice. Aphrodites day of celebration is July 4th. A coincidence is it not that the Statue of liberty stems from the lady of justice, setting precedence for the balance and harmony of all things equal under a law abiding code of conduct that would provide independence and liberty for all - Aka the constitution.

And we celebrate Aphrodite on this same very day every year. As I write this in early May 2024, it is interesting to note that the UK upcoming political elections for this year, the most explosive and world changing to date, are set for this coming July 4th. May independence and liberation from unjust tipping scales be finally coming our way?

Known as the balance of the scales in Libra Astrology, she is the one who sets the bar and insists on order and equilibrium across all matters of life whether business, politics, love, internal self expression of identity, a balance of masculine feminine traits within each individual being and thus expressed outwardly in each endeavour of life to make sure there is neutral, appeasing harmony. Sounds awful right?

She was also known as the Goddess of War (after her sister Athena - True warrior queen), where it is believed that the warlike depiction of Aphrodite belongs to her very earliest acolytes and cults in Cyprus. Unlike Athena, who was also birthed as a full grown woman dressed for battle thus representing the more fierce epitome of war via the undertones and decibels of wisdom and knowledge.

Aphrodite however brings her query of war with a side note of 'sexy' and 'We're doing this why? But don't you look great in that uniform!' (Given my anecdote on my sailors above I can concur - I carried her vibe in passing and I didn't question why)

The Island of Cyprus again taking its name Kypros meaning Copper, one of Aphrodite's prominent symbols and commodities was the copper ore or any military metal that was constructed into armour at the time.

Figurines of warriors and hunters dedicated to Aphrodite at her temples indicate that she had a widespread following among military men. She was an affirmed supporter of the troops though it is not at all unlikely that it may just have well been because she couldn't resist a man in a full suit of armour!

Just quickly pointing out where copper is concerned, that when it comes to sex and the ways to prevent the engagement manifesting into a situation where 2 becomes 3. Copper coils or IUDs have been used since ancient times and still in modern times to prevent pregnancy as copper has spermicidal effects on the male sperm and kills it off before it can reach the bullseye! Interesting huh, it's like she knew, NOT TODAY BOYS!

We can read in Homer's Iliad that the influential intent of Aphrodites commitment to the harmony of humankind was very much evident in her all roles where she made concerted efforts to instil just and balanced principles from the heart across all endeavours. Nature being one she took very seriously.

With Vegetation and fertility being her strong reign, and again we see from her birth that she came blowing in from the sea onto land making springtime reign supreme bringing life, colour, breath and expansion to all of earth. It is said that her love of fruits such as pomegranate where she planted them for all are the representations of our sexual juices that spill forth from our fertile desires and so eating this fruit will bring about fertile abundance.

She was however powerless to stop the unfortunate death of her beloved mortal lover Adonis during a hunt though it is said she left him to rest on a bed of lettuce leaves, which is also why lettuce belongs to Aphrodite as it was her last devoted efforts to provide him comfort.

Here in Cyprus, as part of the Kataklysmos celebrations we also include celebrations to enjoy the revival of 'Adonis Memorias' with the feast of Adonis, a festival celebrated by women to honour their mortal man of mystery!

PAPHOS 2022 ADONIS FESTIVAL

So, I guess after deep diving into all of this and let's be honest, we haven't even scratched the surface because Aphrodite is also known as many other things - She's showing us in so many ways the message of love

WHAT DOES THAT MEAN TO YOU? SHE WANTS TO KNOW!

CHARTS

As a lover of all things archetypal when it comes to finding self and searching out the many ways we can discover our identity, personalities and enriching qualities, I do like to look into charting. Yes yes, I much prefer the intuitive approach to finding oneself as opposed to searching for answers within matrix compounds or analytical data as that in itself can be limiting. This tells you that, so therefore you are like this, so to speak

However, a lot of my growth and self understanding has come from insights from within birth charts, not because I find them factual forms of interpersonal definitions but because they can lead to examples of illustrations, concepts, energies and musings that can then enhance the understanding on a deeper level

So for instance, according to my chart at the time of my birth, I have my Venus sign in the 2nd house in Capricorn at exactly 0 degrees. Now to me the 0 degree means more than the actual interpretations or definitions as in chart explorations, 0 or 29 degrees hold the entry exit degree to the entire unfolding angle (crescendo and diminuendo) of what that sign in the house might reflect.

At the stage I am at right now as a 44 year old woman living on Aphrodite Island (Venus Island) I can't take for granted the fact that my 0 degree seems to have been somewhat hugely activated given that I am writing this exact piece on the very deity that my sign sits at. In the second house representing our personal finances, material possessions, and the concept of value.

The fact mine is in Capricorn suggests that my concept of value is determined through traditionally applied methods of disciplined and practical values.

Yes, I honour my traditional path hence why I have an enthusiasm with religion, doctrine and all things pertaining to truth, virtue and purity. I am only really interested in seeking out paths that allow me to enable these values, otherwise I feel I am doing myself a disservice, to myself and others.

My pair of Italian leather shoes - A very classic Capricornian investment. My love of renaissance art, poetry, stature and romance, a very Capricornian outlook on the practicalities of love.

I know that my Venusian energy is far more traditional and clean as opposed to someone that perhaps has their Venus in scorpio and may prefer a little illicit play on the side or secret romance or someone like my husband that has their Venus in Aquarius that makes them more into connections of the mind through a very individualistic approach.

It's super interesting to discover these archetypal differences as they are all so unique and obviously depending on so many other factors, variables and attributes they can be harnessed for the greater good or can really give us a hard time. It's a pretty quirky inquiry. I urge you to explore the themes and if you're interested, we have a whole segment on the VENUS IN THE HOUSES over on our website where you can match your venus depending on your birth time or you can join in with our ARCHETYPES workshop (dates and times allowing) to bring your venus into play even more....

WHERE HAS THIS LED ME?

I've spent years writing pieces on childhood trauma, ways to find your way back to self, creating portals and spaces for people to be able to seek self and ultimately reach high for spirit. I've worked in mentoring and psych support for children assisting them to feel safe whilst journeying through the scary parts of being a child in this realm.

But then I hit the high notes on LOVE. I die on this hill. All the rest is wonderfully necessary but without love, life isn't worth living and with love, you heal all. Do I believe in the ultimate love? I'm not sure, because nothing here is permanent, it is all just an energetic time stamp on the now that is ever changing and evolving.

I have come to consider that love itself ever changes and evolves and that our interpretation of it shouldn't be limited. That perhaps once we can just enjoy the experience of LOVE however that looks for each individual in that now moment, we might find a more resonant connection to it, but an everlasting love with one person that lasts aeons and never dies?

I know that the love I have for my children will never die. Wherever I go to next and forever on from now to the end.....wherever that is if it exists at all I will always love them. That's easy because there were never conditions attached. But a romantic love, sexual love, marital love is different because it comes with expectations, duties and obligations, contracts and roles.

Will I always love my husband? Yes of course, but not easily and if one day he decides that I am not the one for him and he has found a deeper connection in someone else, then please go explore that if you feel you must. I am no one to stand in the way of how another seeks love; however I have committed myself to my husband faithfully and dutifully because that is what I feel I am here to do in this experience. If I ever felt the need to not be with him it would not be for another, it would be for myself

It seems like a contradiction to my message above where I encourage people to not entangle with the many and rather select the few that can offer a more profound source of connection and commit to it.

I am rather cynical about marriage, yet I am myself married but more so because I do not value the systemic contracts and would rather look to a more divine one. If, however, that wasn't on the cards for me in this life time and my marriage should one day end I would never again entangle myself with anyone else. I have had one husband and that for me is enough

Let's quickly look at one of my other all time favourites and this time it is not through my analysis of the tale but rather a colleague of mine 'Evan Amato', Godfather of the new Renaissance (of course I'm all over that) and writer at Culture Critic, who wrote this incredible thread on one of mine and my daughters all time favourite tragic romances:

TOLSTOY'S ANNA KARENINA

Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina" is the story of a passionate love affair that ends in suicide. But it also reveals the dark reason behind why people cheat — and how to avoid doing so yourself.

Anna Karenina is a rich aristocrat trapped in a loveless marriage. Her husband is kind, but career-driven. He often neglects Anna, and she finds him boring. Anna grows increasingly sad and lonely — until she meets a man at a train station...

The man she meets is a young cavalry officer named Vronsky. He's charismatic and loved by all the ladies — but he soon desires Anna

Vronsky's passion brings Anna a sense of joy and excitement she hasn't felt in years. She begins an affair with him, and things turn for the worse

Scandal breaks out when Vronsky impregnates her. Though Anna's husband forgives her, Anna refuses to stop cheating. Instead, she elopes with Vronsky — abandoning her family and her children

Unfortunately, the two lovers will soon discover just how shallow their "love" is...

The scandal brings great shame to Anna. Friends, family, and society turn on her for betraying her family. She's forced into social exile — unable to leave her house without being mocked

Lonely and outcast, she begins clinging to Vronsky. Vronsky, meanwhile, discovers that Anna's love doesn't make him happy

He's ashamed that he ruined her marriage, and grows repulsed by her clinginess. He grows distant, and Anna feels herself losing the only man who won't reject her

From here, things begin to spiral...

Anna turns to drugs to numb her loneliness. Jealousy, paranoia, and rage consume her. She begins to hate Vronsky, convinced he's cheating on her and about to leave

Finally, the pair have a fight, and Anna believes she's lost Vronsky — all she had to live for — for good...Driven insane by the fallout from her affair, Anna throws herself under a moving train

Her death is graphic — but her downfall has been immortalised for other reasons

Specifically, Anna's tale is a universal warning against adultery...

Tolstoy doesn't simply warn that adultery is bad. He warns that adultery — and all marital discontent — is preceded by a dereliction of duty: A marriage doesn't fall apart when it becomes unhappy...

It falls apart when spouses forget the commitment they made to love each other

Anna's affair was entirely selfish — her main concern was “how can I be happy?” She never considered her husband or her children

Tolstoy asserts that by ignoring her duty to her family, Anna led them all to disaster. So what does he say you should do in an unhappy marriage?

Tolstoy's solution is simple — do your duty.

Uphold the vows you made to love and serve your family, even when it seems fruitless

Ultimately, Tolstoy says, a meaningful life is built by you fulfilling your duty

Not by chasing your own personal happiness...

All of this is summed up in the opening line of Anna Karenina:

“Happy families are all alike; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way.”

But why are all happy families alike?

Because they’re all characterised by one principle — adherence to duty

It is precisely by adhering to your vows — especially when you least want to — that true love is shown

Lasting relationships are built on this sense of duty, of living up to your vows no matter what

And they’re destroyed by failing to do just that

At least, that’s what Tolstoy says — do you agree?

(FYI MY FAVE VERSION OF ANNA KARENINA IS MOST DEFINITELY THE 1985 VERSION WITH JACQUELINE BISSET BUT THE BOOK BEATS ALL MOVIES FOR SURE!)

It must be said that these lessons hit hard for me. I will not lie, I often get tired in my marriage. I find it hard, sometimes impossible to compromise, communicate, reason.

I have had thoughts of quitting. Not so much cheating but walking away when the going gets tough, absolutely. I often wonder, 'Why this guy?' - I have been married for 16 years.

We have both changed. We are very different but we are still together and as butterfly effect as those thoughts can be and as tempting as it might some days seem to pull the plug, I am reminded that I am dutiful and that I REALLY DO LOVE HIM!

That I said vows, NOT TO A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL but to God. My higher self and to HIM, the man I stood there and promised myself to through better or worse and after all said and done, he is my very best friend

There are times I think 'THIS IS JUST A TRAUMA BOND' - Especially when something happens to make me feel powerless or conflicted but then I am reminded that actually, communication can get us out of these conflicts.

I didn't marry an ogre. If I open up and share how I feel we can figure out ways to move past the painful times. (If I did marry an ogre and resolving conflict might not be an option, yes, I would leave. I don't encourage anyone to stay in an abusive marriage)

My husband is very much a man. He is very masculine. What do I mean?

His ways of perceiving and actioning reality are: A-B-C = JOB DONE.

My ways of perceiving and actioning reality are: Start at H, move back 2 spaces, flip upside down and attempt to rectify scenarios whilst doing the splits and often in another language, then proceed to P, collect speeding tickets and leave them in a drawer cos I don't pay that shit, move to Q, experience some female rage, go back to B = bed for the duration of my menstrual cycle and then start all over again at a varying space from the time before but don't forget to take out the laundry and if you get close to the finish line, pole shift your way back to somewhere and order a cocktail!

The differences are sublime! Truly! I often feel for him....

He can struggle with depression. He has some hard saturn aspects, his mars is in cancer which makes him hella moody and he struggles with the concepts of structured life even though he thrives on it.

He makes problems for himself in order to find ways out of them but a lot of the time they get projected onto me. I guess I asked for it. I always seem to end up in situations with people that need me to help figure ways out whilst we try to not break each other or ourselves. Joy!

But I wouldn't change it for the world. His dutiful wife. His constant confidant. I know he finds me utterly bonkers and often times I'm sure I am part of his constructed problems but that's just how we are

I think too many people either go into commitment too easily without doing their due diligence, you know, just for the shits and giggles. Or they give up too easily. And round and round we go!

All these lessons. All these experiences. All these influencing energies we should harness and utilise in order to make it all even more of a ride!

SECRETS SHARED

But, what does all and any of this have to do though with Aphrodite having a secret though? What has been the point of any of this other than the obvious detailing of a spiritual, Godly exploration through the various realms to seek absolute love?

Well, it would seem that my beloved deity has let me well and truly in. Through the archetypal energetics of this complex yet exquisite female influencer, she has handed me the key.

As we can see through this entire rambling analysis of Aphrodite, her energy is not linear. She can be beneficent and loving. A true flag waver for love across all the sexes and genders. She can go from twin flame divine feminine masculine unions to transgender explorations and embodiment. But she can also be vengeful and malefic. She can go into the lower frequency of prostitution, sexual torment and manipulation. She can be dark and curse the violent against sexual misconduct and punish those that act in harmful ways.

She is always the contrasting force within any war. Working closely with Mars to provide the female force within any operation. A warrior that flows fiercely between the contrasts of love and hate, war and peace. Hence the balancing of the scales. Wherever she shows up in your chart and however that is opposed, trined or squared she offers you insights into finding ways to solve crisis or elevate power within the forces

The energy she allows us to use from her frequency emitting powers are for each of us different based on our own unique interpretation of what she represents. Each sign, house, angle and degree working in accordance to however we chose to action it.

Throughout my explorations, she has allowed me through my own interpretation to write a version of her story

More than anything, she has helped me see the divinity in the sacred union of love and chastity.

The excitement of the moments we might share with others prior to committing to our one true love.

She gave me sailors in Rome, boyfriends from lands afar, a long term relationship that challenged me emotionally and mentally and thus helped me create safe boundaries and expectations for what later relationships would benefit from

Now I sit here on her Island and hope to share the same wisdom and hope with you that it is worth every second to share a life with someone and witness them through the body, mind and spirit of a maiden, a seductress, a priestess, a huntress, a sage, a queen, a lover, a mother, a friend, a mystic, a mad hatter - land dweller, ocean explorer, high flier, twisted fire starter

Whatever the season and wherever life takes you, may you embrace the journey, the dark times and light. The good and the bad. All of it!

Aphrodite knows, coming from the land of milk and honey that contrary to common belief, the honeymoon phase is not the peak of a relationship.

For all those that wonder why after some years the excitement fades, it is because you are chasing a feeling. That thrill doesn't last forever because it was never meant to. It is what happens when you light a sparkler or a firework. The chemical reaction creates such an explosion that once it fades and the sparks stop firing, the matter is still hot, you don't want to touch it for a good while after, but there in the simmer is where you find the deepest magic. The real connection.

That connection is called sacred love. Once you have gotten to know that person inside out and they you. Once the reality of life has kicked in and their socks stink and morning breath is really a thing. Once the glamour of the spark has sparked out what are you left with?

A journeyA life.....

If we want our marriages and our families, children and everything else in our lives to play out to the best of their potential, we have to put in the effort to do so as consciously as possible, with awareness, dedication, consideration, respect, intention, empathy and LOVE

NOTHING WILL EVER BE AS DIVINE AS THE UNADULTERATED TRUST, SAFETY AND SECURITY OF INTIMACY IN A RELATIONSHIP
WHERE BOTH ARE FULLY COMMITTED TO THE UNION

So what's the secret?

APHRODITE'S SECRET

This Island is hugely known for anything and everything Aphrodite, where many come from far and wide to celebrate the goddess and her Adonis

There are numerous significant points across the island that bare symbology to both of the deities, in particular Aphrodite baths up near Latchi and Adonis waterfalls where you can have your picture takes with statues of the many Gods and Goddesses from Adonis, Aphrodite, Athena, Zeus and Priapus who is rumoured though not confirmed to have been the illegitimate son of Aphrodite and horny boy Pan, but Priapus, boasting his permanent massive erection is always a showstopper and everyone (namely the women of visiting groups) have to have a close up selfie as a keepsake!

One of my gay friends Chris has always said, that during his 12 years here, he has enjoyed numerous illicit encounters and states that this Island is the Island of temptation. You just cannot escape it.

I can concur that throughout our 16 year marriage, I (or rather we) have never been hit on so much by swingers, extramarital adventurers and other clandestine forces as we have since living here. The sex vibe here is strong. Not going to lie. Erections everywhere friends!

So the waterfalls are located in Paphos, though Aphrodite's baths are on the further side, a smaller waterfall high up in the hills of Latchi. It's a slight trek to find and then a small walk up to the baths but worth it to see the flora and fauna that flourish up on the hills.

For being such a small community, there is for sure a huge eco-diverse network going on including 168 bird varieties, 20 reptile species, 16 types of butterflies, and a dozen different mammals, alongside a remarkable range of flora such as Cyprus tulips, cyclamen, orchids, milk thistles, juniper forests, jerusalem pines and a million yellow and white flowers that scatter the greenery which higher up and in off seasons is magnificent

Anyway, you get up there and from the top you can see the whole of the coastal area. I've not yet mentioned the turtles or dolphins that are in the blue lagoon at the bottom of the baths but to get to it it's quite a hike or boat trip but, as you pass from the walk paths or boats, you will find some pretty secluded little pebble beaches down below.

One of which is only accessible down some pretty hectic flights of stairs from the only restaurant at the top by the Aphrodite baths car park and given that most visitors come up here on a sightseeing bus or group coaches, they literally don't have time to stop to wander as they're on a schedule. So they truly miss the best part. Whether this is deliberate or not, who knows?

Then we have what is known as 'Aphrodite's rock', way way over by the airport almost on route to Limassol on the exit of Paphos so far side from the other tourist attractions but yet all the tourists flood there to this collection of rocks, known as APHRODITE'S ROCK (not sure which is hers as there are a scattering) where they believe, as the myth goes, that if they swim around it 3 times they will be blessed with eternal beauty and youth.

As you can see, there are a few. Which 'one' is hers I am not sure and I will point out also that the photographer has clearly used a great filter because every single time I've been it's near impossible to swim around even the easiest to access without getting crashed, sliced or taken under.

I guess everyone's assuming it's this one? No filter

The Canadian gang and us before we got thrashed

One of my besties, also Kat, came from Canada and she said 'Mate, fuck botox. Let's swim this thing 3 times and after we'll be like 18 year old virgins again'. We tried hard. Think we managed to get around twice. She got cut badly. It wasn't graceful.

MYTHS AND LEGENDS

As the story also goes, 'Venus was birthed on the shores that she 'bathed in' and according to the Myth, well, if you head West and venture over to Aphrodite's bath (aka where she bathed) which is located in the town we mentioned above, Latchi, well, there just happens to also be a rock out at sea with a great big cross on the top. Like an X marks the spot. Literally, no jokes!

Now remember I said, the tourist buses are on a schedule so no one has time to stop and wander but, if you do indeed have time and if you can get down there and we often do, you can very easily access the little beaches that have spring water coming down from the waterfall in the baths above.

A couple of pics below of me and the kids at the end of summer 2023 heading down to the magic. My eldest, libra baby venusian goddess in all her glory!

Last weekend before school

Venus child

And you can swim around the rock 3 times or however many times you like and it happens to be the most incredible swim on the entire island with insane amounts of colourful fish, bright blue waters and some excellent dive spots and reefs.

But the funny thing is, that the rock itself has a great big indentation on the front of it and it looks like an open fan or a clam shell from a distance, much like the Botticelli painting of Venus standing in the rock itself

Zoom in and see 👁️👁️

VENUS

And even funnier is that when you swim up to the rock with the fanning clam shell and the giant X marks the spot, if you catch good light in summer (not so much in winter but remember, Aphrodite is the spring summertime goddess,) the rocks both underneath the water and on the surface are shimmery pink / purple in colour! HER COLOUR!

DON'T BE FOOLED BY THE ROCKS THAT I GOT

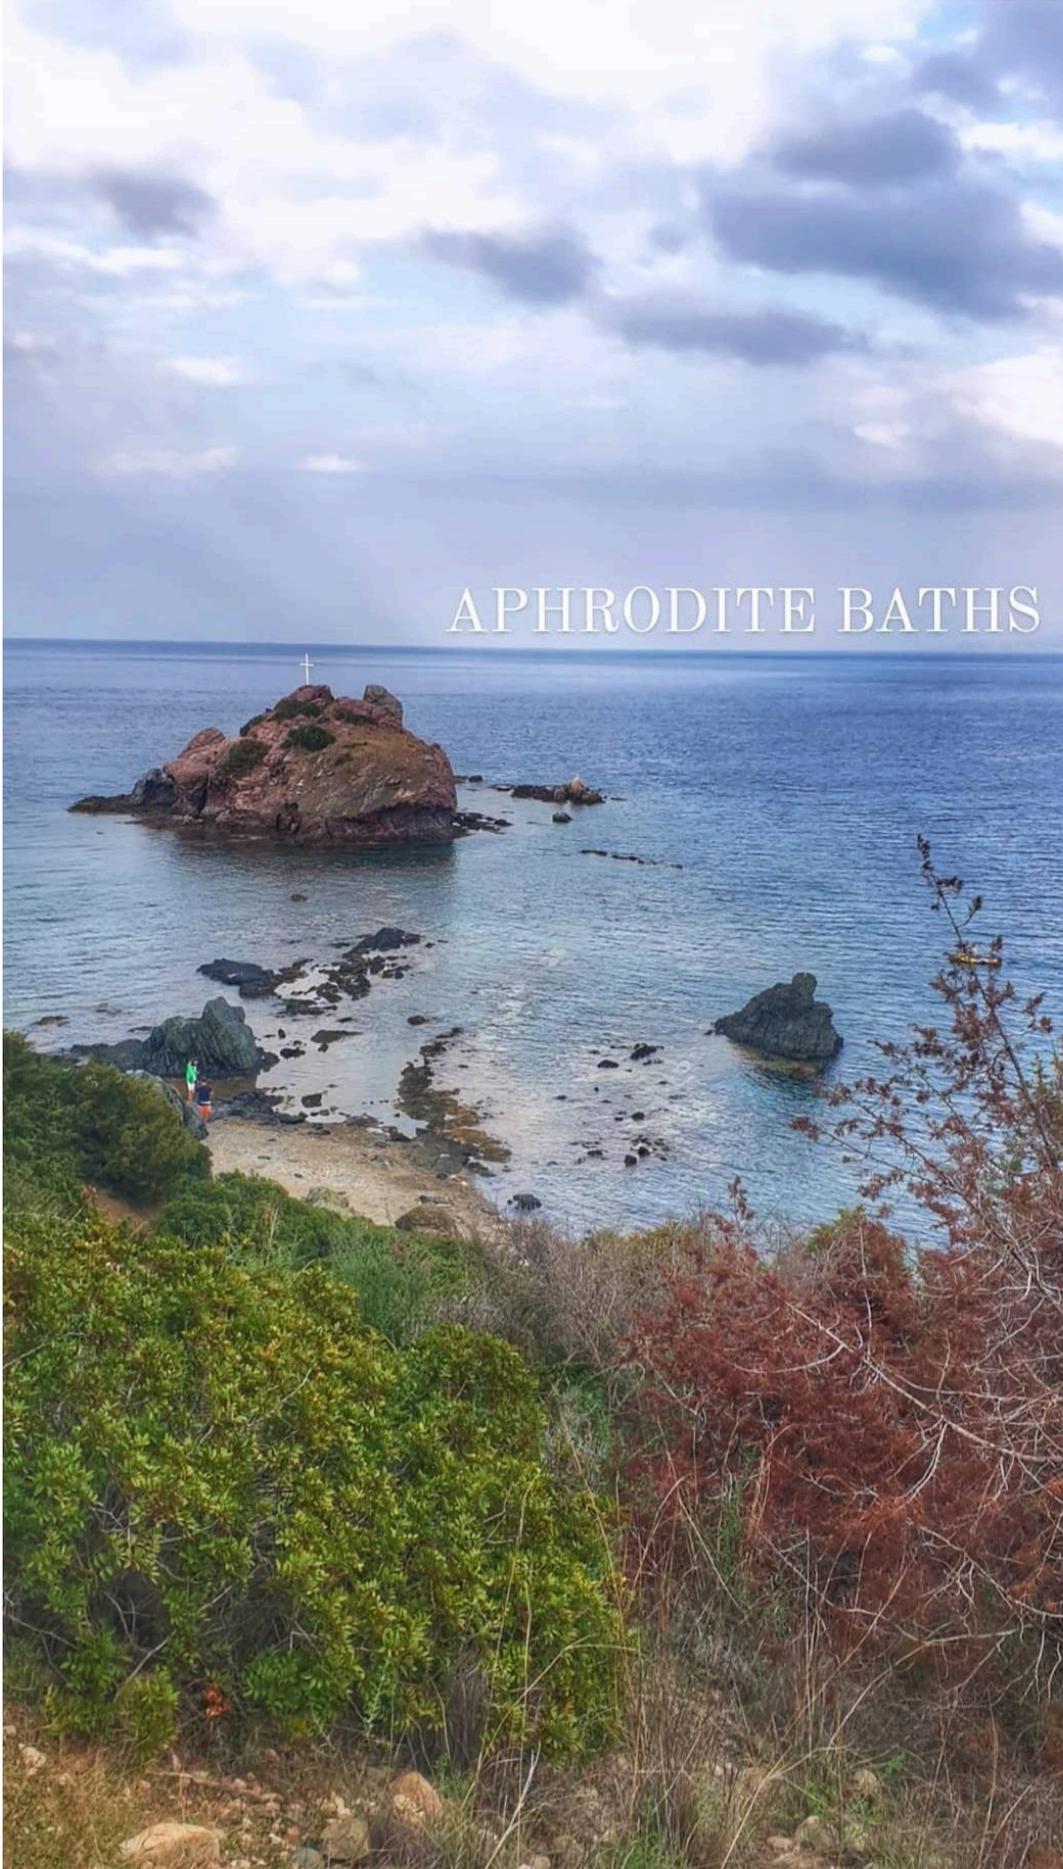

Not the giant pile of collective sea rubble at the airport my goodness!

We came to Aphrodites true rock and beach with some friends and I ran my theory past them and said, 'could it be that we've got it wrong and if so why', and my friend Dean did say yes, it makes sense given what I had explained and you know me, I go in deep and detailed and for them, unfamiliar to Aphrodite and the myths and legends of, I didn't think they'd get as excited about it as I did. But they did!

It was like I had uncovered some huge earthly secret that only I knew about but they did get excited and we dissected this for a good while and they all agreed that I might be quite right!

We were at the baths, the rock with the X MARKS THE SPOT on the most serene, idyllic beaches of the island where the eucalyptus blows on shore and the rock itself shimmers pink while shaped like a fan clam shell....Too much of a coincidence.

APHRODITE BATHS

So we decided that it was most likely that the 'authorities' had decided to put a name and number on another rock further out of town so that this small, quaint, idyllic little piece of paradise island didn't get overrun with tourists, dumping their trash all over her blessed beaches and instead, those wanting to see the sights for a quick photo and a splash could get in somewhere easier to access and clean up...

And that those that really wanted to care about decoding the myth and legend would find a way.

If you're reading this, then I guess I've 'let the cat out the bag' and I'm sure she wouldn't mind me saying given that the codes and magic available to those that truly want it, will be received with gratitude and dedication to her secret where you will visit with respect, peace and purpose (not just a quick 5 min photo opportunity and a race round a makeshift olympian aqua circuit)

So, while she is a goddess that is accessible, she is discrete and discerning. Where most think she is, she is in fact not yet she lets you know exactly where you can find her! If you open your heart and let love in...

I just think it's so funny how everyone falls for the story and they rush to take their pics over by some pungy rock, all the while the absolute unhinged true beauty stands unnoticed on the other side of the island!

I feel after everything I have poured into this book, whilst under the influence of a certain love Goddess, I wish to conclude that everything is just opinion. It's all just perspective, possibility and probability.

It's up to us to design our fate though it is likely we are helped along the way (and discouraged probably also) though is it all worth it?

ABSOLUTELY!

We are here to feel experience, give, receive, touch, taste, share, dare! It's life and it's to live and love!

What advice would I give?

Keep your sexual indiscretions discreet: Only engage in sex where you feel safe. After that, swing from the rafters if that's your call but make sure you have strong sexual boundaries to avoid getting hurt or hurting others

Don't get married until you have hit 30: Wait until after your 1st saturn return to commit to someone or anyone! Marriage takes commitment, responsibility and maturity.

Your 20's are for you to live, learn and decide what way is best for you and with who. Before then is the playground. The fun time, so enjoy it! You'll probably enjoy a marriage much better also if you are clearer as to why you made the decisions you did and what your intentions are Always be open and communicate: It's very tough to share your thoughts and feelings at the best of times but keep the channels of communication always open and flowing. Don't be afraid to say what you think or feel. It's the best way to always know where you stand and you'll be able to rectify all problems if they are out in the open. Having said that, NEVER GO TO BED ANGRY.

Even if you're having a blaster - say goodnight. Sleep on it and in the clear light of day you'll see differently.

And with that, I will love you and leave you!

I am so blessed to have been able to share this little piece of love magic and secret decoding with you from our gossip queen love goddess that's clearly got a great sense of humour and likes to keep us all on our pretty toes!

Why she chose me to be able to deliver this cluster of insight and bring you all up to the love bar to seek out her wisdom, I have no idea but, I am eternally grateful that she had so that I can share it with you!

“Time is too slow for those who wait, too swift for those who fear, too long for those who grieve, too short for those who rejoice, but for those who love, time is eternity” Henry Van Dyke
